Beef, Wages, Jobs.
Killing Kidnapers.
More and Cheaper Dollars.
Message From Indiana.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 18.

MISS PERKINS, Secretary of Labor, provides the cheerful news that 85,000 workers were added to the nation's payrolls during the last month, and weekly wages increased by $6,000,000.

Since March, according to Miss Perkins, more than 2,800,000 workers have found employment, while payrolls in October were $70,000,000 above the March figure.

THE PRESIDENT proposes to increase the number of jobs by 4,000,000; $400,000,000 has been set aside for that purpose. And Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, has given $500,000 to the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation "to buy low grade Texas cattle at a minimum price of $1.75 per hundred pounds."

The beef will be processed and distributed to the needy. One dollar and seventy-five cents a hundred pounds, less than two cents a pound, is cheap meat.

"Properly cooked it is as nourishing as the most expensive. No one can say the government is not trying.

"WHY," ASKS a reader," do you seem to approve capital punishment for kidnapers, after opposing capital punishment for years?"

Answer: Because murder of the usual kind is not discouraged by capital punishment; on the contrary, when government sets the example of killing, the degraded criminal follows the example.

Capital punishment does not discourage ordinary murder based on hatred, revenge, jealousy, etc.

But capital punishment does discourage the kidnaping industry and to do that is desirable.

Kidnaping is not murder of the old kind, it is a new industry in which criminal industrialists like other business men run so much risk with hope of so much profit.

The greater the risk, the less attractive the possible profit. The hangman and technicians in charge of the electric chair make the risk too great.

Two men in California admitted kidnaping a 22-year-old boy. They killed him, threw him in the bay and telephoned his father and mother to send $40,000 "if you want to see your son alive."

It speaks well for the self-control of men in California that the two kidnaper-murderers were allowed to survive their confession by as much as an hour.

SENATOR THOMAS of Oklahoma says government must issue more and cheaper dollars, or debts must be repudiated. The old "die-hards" will tell him "cheaper dollars are the same things as debt repudiation."

Senator Thomas says that in 1929, when the crash came:

"There was less than five billion dollars of money in circulation, although banks showed deposits of approximately sixty billion."

He adds that because of "credit inflation" before 1929:

"The people have amassed debts of approximately two hundred and fifty thousand million dollars."

THE MORE you hear and read about money, the firmer grows your conviction that nobody knows anything about it, from the South Sea Islander who considers cowry shells the only good money, to the capitalist who wants "gold only" and on to the man in debt, who yells for greenbacks, more and cheaper dollars and plenty of them.

CLYDE H. PETERS writes from Vallonia, Ind.:

"I see in the Indiana Star you say because immigration has fallen off we are increasing our surplus wheat, corn, cotton, hogs, etc. Come to southern Indiana and go around with me.

"I will show you what has more to do with our surplus of things to eat and wear than immigration. School children are coming to school with only barely clothes enough on to hide their naked bodies and lots of these children are not even lucky enough to get half what they should have to eat.

"In several instances, teachers have asked their pupils where their dinner buckets were and the teachers have been informed that there was nothing at home to put in the dinner buckets."

That is not a pleasant picture of "civilization" among high-spirited Americans in the richest country in the world.

If conditions are as described, then the country does need immigration, a few million of men and women that would not allow their children to be half-starved without doing something about it.

SCIENTISTS of St. Louis, Mo., deserving highest praise, have real information about the sleeping sickness.

They say the disease starts in the mouth and nose. Experiments with mice prove it. Also the disease itself develops a substance that protects.

An extract made from the brain of a human being dead of the sickness, injected into mice, protected them from sleeping sickness, even when directly inoculated with the disease.

PROVIDENCE sending diseases to chasten us, and make us patient, also sends remedies for each. It is our business to find it.

McNair Tries Dignity in Derby

MAYOR-TO-BE VEERING TO SILK HAT

Adopts New Strategy To Hush Critics of Informal Actions

William N. McNair, Democracy's chief executive-to-be, of Pittsburgh, radiated dignity today:

New items in his sartorial life were:

One (1) double-breasted black Chesterfield overcoat.

One (1) black derby (very good looking.)

One (1) white cvarnation.

And a shoe shine.

And, says McNair—Mr. McNair today—if his humorless critics don't think that's enough, why:

"I'll get myself a silk hat and see how they like that."

McNair exhibited his new finery in his little Bakewell Buildingg office today and said:

"Well, they wanted me to be dignified, so I thought I'd try this for a while and see how they liked it."

One of the endless crowd of hand-shakers that haunt his office called to him:

"Why not a brown derby, Mayor?"

McNair stepped out of a pose just carefully completed for a photographer and said:

"I don't think you can get them."

Someone asked if he'd wear one if it was bought for him and McNairreplied:

"Sure. Size six and seven-eighths."

He had no cane but he inferred he might be prevailed upon to carry one if he had.

And that new and dignified boulevardier of Pittsburgh, William N. McNair, descended to the street to look after the interests of a persistent woman client.

She is Miss Margaret Alison Reed, 32, of Valencia, Pa., daughter of Joseph A. Reed, former general superintendent of the Equitable Gas Company, now retired. The bridegroom is Jean J. Laveda, a professor in a college at Tours.

Miss Reed went to Paris three years ago to study the French language, her father said, and she met Laveda about a year ago while studying there. She is a graduate of Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pa., and worked in the business office at Pennsylvania College for Women for a short time.

At his home near Valencia, known as "Alaneve," Reed said of his daughter's marriage:

"I received a letter a few days ago from my daughter in which she said she was marrying Laveda. They plan to visit here in the early summer and then make their home in Tours."

JURY LOCKED IN ELECTION FRAUD CASE

Fails to Find Verdict After 24 Hours in Third Ward Trial

Twelve heavy-eyed jurors were still debating a verdict in the government's first vote fraud trial today, more than 24 hours after they had retired.

Throughout the night, except for a few hours of sleep, the jury argued the guilt or innocence of five members of the election board of the Ninth District, Third Ward, and a Negro constable, charged with conspiracy to violate the vote laws at the Congressional election last November.

While the jurors deliberated, a crowd thronged the corridors of the Federal Building awaiting a verdict.

JUDGE IN COURT

Judge F. P. Schoonmawer was in court at 10 a. m. and indicated he would remain for several hours.

Members of the jury were served box lunches in their room on the fourth floor today. Bailiff Charles J. Driestadt, of South Greensburg, guarded the doors.

They had returned to the courtroom late yesterday seeking instructions from Judge Schoonmaker. They requested a list showing the names and number of witnesses who had testified they voted a straight Democratic ticket.

Judge Schoonmaker informed them that under the law they

RYAN'S DEFEAT LAID TO TERROR

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 18.—Charging that deputy sheriffs armed with machine guns, riot guns, maces and tear gas bombs were kept within the polls to intimidate voters, Attorney Anthony Cavalcante today petitioned the court to throw out the entire vote of Redstone Township, hotbed of the coal strike.

Other infractions were alleged by Cavalcante, who was official striker observer for Gov. Pinchot.

The balloting resulted in defeat of Martin Ryan insurgent strike leader, for school director of the township, notwithstanding he was on the Republican, Democratic and Socialist tickets.

He lost by 87 votes to John Harshman, running on the Independent ticket.

Ryan was backed by the United Mine Workers. The union's candidate for tax collector also was defeated.

Gershwin Conducts Own Rehearsal for Concert

Anxiousc to "iron out the kinks" and insure smoothness in the presentation of his own serious music at the concert at Syria Mosque tomorrow George Gershwin hurried directly from the train bringing him to Pittsburgh today to personally direct a rehearsal of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchester in the Moose Temple.

The second part of the concert tomorrow, Pittsburgh first Sunday concert with an open box office, will be devoted entirely to three of Gershwin's major works, "Concerto in F," "An American in Paris" and the famous "Rhapsody in Blue." Gershwin will be at the piano, with William Daly, his personal conductor, wielding the baton.

At the rehearsal today, Gershwin emphasized the jazz rhythms of his music, seeking to instill his own vital spirit into the playing of the orchestra. And so hard did he work at the job that 10 minutes after he started he shed his coat!

He has two big jobs ahead of him, Gershwin said today. The first of the year will see him leading his own orchestra on a rapid tour. He expects to play in 30 cities in 30 nights. The other job is the writing of the music for a new American opera, "Porgy," which will have an all-colored cast. What kind of music?

He made a sweeping gesture and said:

"Typical American—some of it based on Negro spirituals."

Gershwin will help the Pittsburgh Symphony Society to celebrate the victory over the ancient Pennsylvania blue law tomorrow at 2 p. m., when he will sell the first ticket. He said today:

"And I'll be happy to do it. Good music shouldn't hace to wait on a clock."

Meat Packers Import 200 to End Strike Here

Prices Up Slightly, Dealers Say, Fear Shortage

Determined efforts to end the packing house strike will be made next week by employers, it was indicated today with the reported arrival of 200 men here to replace those now on strike.

The men arrived by bus and were unloaded on the South Side. They will not be used, however, unless the strike continues.

Retailers in the North Side Market House said they were paying from one to three cents a pound more for meats and lard and were passing this on to the consumer. No price cards were displayed, for the first time in years, today.

Smaller dealers, unable to lay in a reserve supply, looked forward to a shortage next week, unless the strike ends.

A survey of the affected plants early today indicated that the ranks of the strikers had been broken. In several it was stated some men had returned to work.

Few deliveries were made today. Some were made in the downtown district yesterday under police escort. In most cases retailers went to plants for their supply.

Police continued guarding packing plants to avert trouble.

Pitt Battles Nebraska Here

By JESS CARVER

PITT STADIUM, Nov. 18.—Weather and field conditions were far from ideal as the Pitt Panthers prepared to renew their annual football warfare with the Nebraska Cornhuskers, undefeated and untied champions of the Big Six Conference, here this afternoon.

Murky skies held out a distinct threat of rain, and a haze shrouding the field promised poor visibility for the late periods of the battle. Stadium-bound traffic moved slowly over slippery streets, and the big bowl was only partially filled as time for the kick-off neared. A crowd of 30,000 was expected.

Although they have won only one of seven games played with the Panthers since 1919, the Huskers appeared extremely confident of victory.

The contest affords Pitt its third opportunity this fall to put the kibosh on a perfect record. The SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 18.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today hailed Russian recognition as a world aid and to the people of Georgia he expressed scorn on the "doubting Thomases" of his gold-control monetary program.

Before a throng essembled at the spacious municipal stadium, Mr. Roosevelt put forward his Russian and monetary programs and received the applause of the sun-warmed citizens.

The President said:

"I believe sincerely that the most impelling motive that has lain behind the conversations which were successfully concluded yesterday between Russia and United States was the desire of both countries for peace and for the strengthening of the peaceful purpose of the civilized world."

GUARANTEES ON RELIGION GIVEN TO AMERICA

Bullitt Slated for Ambassador To Moscow

WASHINGTON, Nov 18.—(AP.)—The United States and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are bound in a new relationship which they hope "may forever remain normal and friendly."

Those were the words with which President Roosevelt and Maxim Litvinoff closed the 16-year-old gap in official kinship.

They were in President Roosevelt's letter informing Litvinoff that "the United States has decided to establish normal diplomatic relations" with the Soviet Union, and the Russian Commissar's reply that his government "is glad" to do likewise.

BULLITT SELECTED

Already William C Bullitt, State Department expert on Russian affairs, has been designated as the first American Ambassador to Moscow since the Soviet took control, in 1917. Russian acceptance of his appointment is expected momentarily.

Recognition, effective as of 11:50 p. m., Thursday, was announced by Mr. Roosevelt just before departing for Warm Springs, Ga. A little while later, Litvinoff told newspapermen a hope "cherished for 16 years has been realized."

Accompanying the announcement was an exchange of letters between the President and the Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, setting forth new understandings on major issues which had separated the two nations since 1917.

These included:

1—A mutual agreement to prevent subversive propaganda, such as activities of any organization or group "which has as an aim the overthrow or the preparation for the overthrow or, or the bringing about by force of a change in the political or social order" of either government.

This was regarded by some officials here as a further break between the Soviet government and the Third International, which might be interpreted as a warning to this world-wide Communist organization to leave Russia or halt any efforts directed against American democracy.

Asked the question, Litvinoff said:

"Don't read intentions into my letter which are not there."

2—A Russian guarantee of full freedom of religious worship and rites to United States nationals, with the further promise that no American will be refused visas on purely ecclesiastical grounds.

3—A statement of Moscow's intention to write into a consular convention a grant of legal protection to American citizens equal to existing most-favored-nation treatment. This will include a notification to

All Russia Hails News Of American Pact

MOSCOW, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—All Soviet Russia, from a chubby, red-cheeked girl tending a tram-car switch in one of Moscow's downtown squares to high government officials, hailed news of American recognition today in a burst of popular enthusiasm.

Morning newspapers gave the most prominent display to texts of the exchanges between President Roosevelt and Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff at Washington.

Five and six columns on page one were devoted to a presentation of the official communique from the American capital. And there were large pictures of both the President and Litvinoff.

Comment, however, was lacking, as the newspapers had only time to hurry the big news into print after it was received from the United States late last night.

Most of the newspapers used the same headline—"Establishment of normal relations between the Soviet government and the U. S. A."

But if there was a dearth of immediate comment from newspaper quarters, it was made up for in the street.

There an attitude of general satisfaction was manifest on all sides and the opinion prevailed that Litvinoff had achieved the outstanding triumph of his diplomatic career.

A Soviet lawyer said:

"American recognition will greatly enhance our prestige in world politics."

Stamping her feet to warm them, a sunny-dispositioned girl at a tram-car switch, observed in answer to a correspondent's question, "Vso budit horosho," meaning:

"All will be well now . . ."

consuls of any arrests and becomes effective immediately.

ECONOMIC ESPIONAGE

4—An explanation by Litvinoff, in reply to Mr. Roosevelt's questions on prosecutions for economic espionage, stating that the right to obtain economic information in Russia is limited "as in other countries, only in the case of the employment of forbidden methods (bribery, theft, fraud, etc.) to obtain such information."

5—A Soviet release to the United States government, preparatory to a final settlement, of any claims which might be due the Soviet government as the successor of prior Russian governments. Mr. Roosevelt said he would notify Moscow of any amounts realized on such claims.

6—A Soviet waiver to any claims arising from the Siberian expedition of American armed forces subsequent to 1918. This did not include, however, the Archangel expedition. Litvinoff said the waiver was made "to show our good will" and because the United States had recognized at the time the territorial integrity of the Soviet Union.

7—President Roosevelt and Litvinoff joined in a statement on claims which said:

"In addition to the agreements which we have signed today, there has taken place an exchange of views with regard to methods of settling all outstanding questions of indebtedness and claims that permits us to hope for a speedy and satisfactory solution of these questions which both our governments desire to have out of the way as soon as possible. Mr. Litvinoff will remain in Washington for several days for further discussions."

DIPLOMATIC CHANNELS

The Soviet Commissar later said he thought these questions could be solved through normal diplomatic channels. American private and governmental claims run from $600,000,000 to $700,000,000.

Litvinoff, in a talk to members of the press, forecast increasing unity "in the field of economics, culture and the struggle for peace." He expressed the hope that "really normal relations" and "really friendly relations" rather than simply the conventional diplomatic interchange, would prevail.

Speculation centered on the letters covering propaganda. The Commissar said his government's "fixed policy" would be:

"To respect scrupulously the indisputable right of the United States to order its own life within its own jurisdiction in its own way and to refrain from interfering in any manner in the internal affairs of the United States, its territories or possessions.

"To refrain and to restrain all persons in government service and all organizations of the government or under its direct or indirect control, including organizations in receipt of any financial assistance from it, from any act tending to incite or encourage armed intervention, or the bringing about by force of a change in the political or social order of the whole or any part of the United States."

THIRD INTERNATIONAL

This brought thoughts of the Third International, many of whose leaders have been prominent in the Soviet government. But when a reporter questioned Litvinoff on the connection between the Communist party of Russia and that of the United States, he replied quickly:

"The Communist party of Russia has nothing to do with the United States and the Communist party of the United States has nothing to do with Soviet Russia."

In the same letter also was a statement of Soviet policy "not to form, subsidize, support or permit on its territory military organizations or groups having the aim of armed struggle against the United States and to prevent any recruiting on behalf of such organizations and groups."

Some officials said this smacked of language in non-aggression pacts between Russia and her neighbors. Litvinoff indicated to the press he would be favorably inclined to such a pact with the United States, though he laughed off dangers of conflict. But administration sources were doubtful the United States would accept a covenant of this kind with one other nation.

Japanese War Curb Seen In Soviet U.S. Pact

TOKIO, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Conservative Japanese businessmen long hopefully awaiting developments which would tend to weaken military domination of the empire's policies and curb the war spirit, expressed belief today, according to Japanese news agency interviews, that American recognition of Russia might prove such an influence.

In such an event, political unrest might be mitigated and a less bellicose spirit rule the people, the businessmen said they believed.

On the other hand, commercial leaders said they feared recognition might lead Russia to seek American materials for carrying on the second five-year plan, of which the Japanese had hoped to supply a considerable portion.

Vernacular newspapers quoted a war office spokesman as expressing the opinion Moscow would be likely to interpret American recognition as a pledge of support in Soviet anti-Japanese policies, resulting in a stiffer Soviet attitude toward Japan.

LONDON HAILS AGREEMENT

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—New guarantees for world peace were seen by British newspapers today in American recognition of Soviet Russia.

The News-Chronicle said:

"It is one more step in the direction of international co-operation at a time when every step in that direction is a clear gain for the hope of world peace."

It added that the development was a "spectacular triumph" for Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Foreign Commissar.

The London Mirror declared:

"It looks as though Litvinoff, at President Roosevelt's invitation, has achieved a diplomatic and financial triumph."

The Herald, in an editorial rushed in to replace one on another subject which had appeared in early editions, declared the Russo-American agreement was a "triumph for sanity and common sence" which has been delayed only by "prejudice and foolish inherited tradition."

NEW UPRISING FEARED IN CUBA

HAVANA, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—While soldiers strengthened the barricades around the presidential palace early today, President Ramon Grau San Martin asserted that "normality and order have been re-established all over Cuba."

Col. Fulgencio Batista ordered extraordinary precautions, he said, because there were rumors that a new uprising against the Grau regime was being planned.

Meanwhile, interest increased in the possible outcome of the conference at Warm Springs, Ga., between President Roosevelt and United States Ambassador Sumner Welles, who left here for the meeting with the President yesterday.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Sumner Welles, United States Ambassador to Cuba, en route to Warm Springs, Ga., to confer with President Roosevelt on developments in the island republic, said upon his arrival here today that the President likely would have a statement regarding their conversations either tonight or tomorrow.

LINER IN CRASH IN N. Y. BAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—The liner Deutschland, loaded with passengers from Europe, collided in New York Bay last night with the steamer Munargo, tearing a great gash in the latter's side and forcing it to be beached off the Statue of Liberty.

The Deutschland, only slightly damaged, moved slowly through the darkness to its pier.

The Munargo, which plies between New York and the West Indies, was crossing the harbor to discharge some of its cargo in Brooklyn. No passengers were aboard.

Capt. Heinrich Dau, of the Deutschland, said that when he realized a collision with the Munargo was inevitable he threw the engine into reverse.

CITY, BOROUGHS MEET ON U. S. JOB RELIEF

85 Communities Get Plans for Projects To Start Soon

Officials of the city, boroughs and townships were meeting this afternoon in the City Council chamber discussing projects to be instituted under the provisions of the Federal Civil Works Administration for Unemployment Relief.

The meeting was called by George P. Mills, secretary of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board. Eighty-five communities are expected to send representatives to the meeting, at which it is expected plans will be submitted for improvements which will be paid for by the federal government under its $400,000,000 relief program.

City officials have already submitted plans for 26 projects at Washington. Among the contemplated undertakings are a playground on Monument Hill, North Side, and various park improvements throughout the city.

JOBLESS RELIEF

According to present plans, the labor for these projects will be selected by officials in the state employment office. It is planned to have the work divided mainly among persons who are now on the relief rolls of the city and county.

Another conference of officials will be held in Harrisburg on Monday at 2:30, according to an announcement made today by Eric H. Biddle, Civil Works Administrator for Pennsylvania.

Mayor John S. Herron and Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang will represent Pittsburgh in the discussion of plans to promote Pennsylvania's share of the work under the Federal Civil Works plan which hopes to place 4,000,000 persons in jobs by December 15.

Biddle estimates about 360,000 persons in the state will find employment under the plans to be outlined at Harrisburg.

GROUP HERE CHEERED

Members of a committee of Pittsburgh business and civic leaders, formed seven months ago to oppose a government dole, were cheered today by the announcements of these two meetings to further President Roosevelt's relief program.

Aims of the committee were presented the government at the time of its organization by Edgar J. Kaufmann, who went to Washington to confer with Prof. Raymond Moley, then special adviser to the President, and other high government officials.

The committee urged relief employment to avert the dole, which at that time seemed nearing actuality.

The committee's plan called for work relief through private and public construction, both to be publicly financed. The Roosevelt plan, so far as is known, limits the relief work to public projects.

Aiding Mr. Kaufmann in the plan were Frederick Bigger, Harold F. Bucher, C. A. Carpenter, Congressman Henry Ellenbogen, Clyde Fellows, John Ihlder, Nathan B. Jacobs, William A. Magee, Philip Matthews, David Tynberg, Dr. Francis Tyson, Dr. R. J. Watkins, Dr. J. Paul Watson and I. D. Wolf.

SHERIFF FIGHT COUNT STILL SEE-SAWS

Gollmar Claims Two Lead; Heinz Gain Reported

With Democrats ready to file petition for recount in any district where election fraud was alleged, the contest for Sheriff was still any man's fight today.

In addition of official returns for 352 districts to the unofficial count, Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar was ahead of the Democrat, John Heinz, by two votes.

But Heinz was the real leader, considering the not yet tabulated changes made by the recount board. There, amid steadily increasing confusion and argument, watchers reported Heinz as having picked up a net gain of 99 votes. Six boxes were recounted.

MORE PETITIONS FILED

Six more recount petitions were filed yesterday, bringing the total to 32. Democrats contemplate a wide recount, and Democratic Attorney B. B. McGinnis said the party would spare no expense to open every questioned box.

Strife in the recount board was fiercest over the question of 19 ballot stubs showing two numbers, and indicating, Democrats asserted, that 19 ballots were voted illegally in the First District of the Third Ward. No ballots were voided, however, for this cause, it being judged impossible to determine which of the ballots corresponded to the double-numbered stubs.

Similar double-numbered stubs were found in the First District, Eleventh Ward. The return judges decided that hereafter a notation be made on the stubs bearing the double numbers for use, it was indicated, in the event of later contests.

The Sheriff vote now stands:

Gollmar	72,024
Heinz	76,968

DENIES FRAUD

Denying that evidence of widespread fraud has been disclosed, Attorney B. Robert Averbach today had joined in the request for a recount of all of the ballots. He said:

"I am authorized to join in this request and would welcome such action on the part of the court. I have been in constant attendance before the returning board presided over by Judges Reid and Dithrich and I deny there has been any evidence of widespread fraud disclosed to the judges up to this time."

TWO CONFESS ARSON PLOT

Two young men confessed today they had burned down a $15,000 frame house Thursday night on the Shaffer road at Moon Run, Pa., according to county detectives.

They are Ted Bush, 24, of Moon Run, and Paul Krisco, 19, of Johnstown. County Detectives John W. Geisler and Bernard Kunning said they obtained the written confession of the men in connection with the alleged incendiary fire.

The house, which was destroyed by fire is said to belong to Mike Vanjura, 75, and his wife, 72. Both men, who are being held on charges of arson and conspiracy to commit arson, confessed that they were hired for $200 to set the house afire.

edy for malaria. It is amusing to remember that good Protestants in Britain said it should not be used because it was a medicine "named for a Catholic saint."

Mercury was the remedy for the worst of blood diseases until "606," an arsenical preparation, gave better results. A form of insanity, hitherto incurable, is treated successfully with an injection of malaria germs, through the bite of germ-bearing mosquitoes.

The malaria sets up an intense fever that cures the insanity. Then quinine cures the malaria.

Vaccination has practically done away with smallpox, which, without it, would still be killing millions a year.

Someone will discover a remedy for cancer, and then the silly-minded will say:

"Don't use it, you are planting poison in your system."

THE SCHOOLMASTER is not "abroad in the land," in New Bedford, Mass. Public schools there are closed, lack of money the reason. Eighteen thousand pupils will go untaught, 500 teachers without pay.

All over the country education is suffering, many schools closed, children on inadequate part time.

Those that lose money now may make up for it in future years. It is not so with children deprived of education.

JURY LOCKED IN VOTE FRAUD

would have to rely on their memory for all testimony and evidence presented in the trial.

Awaiting the verdict were the six defendants: Mike Wendell, judge; Carman Bosco and Charles P. Betters, inspectors; James Stuhlfire and Louis D. Petty, clerks, and George Taylor, election constable.

While the jury in the first case deliberated, the government began the second of its series of ballot fraud trials, involving the election board of the Nineteenth District, Fourth Ward.

The defendants in the second case are Joseph Tortorelli, judge; Malachi Tiernan and Irvin Braun, inspectors, and John F. McNally and Bernard Grossman, clerks.

The government, represented by Attorney Earl F. Reed, special federal prosecutor, and First Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh, produced in evidence the ballots cast in the Nineteenth District, together with other documents pertaining to the election, then called 81 men and women to the witness stand.

They testified to having voted "straight" ballots at the polling place, in Coyne's garage, Parkview avenue. Sixty-eight said they voted Democratic ballots; 11 said they voted the Socialist ballot and two said they voted the Communistic ballot.

U. S. RESTS IN M'CLURE CASE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—The government rested its case against 76 men, accused of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws in Delaware County, today, the forty-first day of the trial. Four witnesses were examined briefly.

During a recess in yesterday's session, the federal grand jury, which has been sitting in conjunction with the trial of State Senator John J. McClure and 75 co-defendants, returned an indictment which was immediately impounded—probaby until the end of the trial.

Its advent caused a wave of speculation, but officials declined to disclose the contents or the number of persons involved.

FOES PREPARE PINCHOT RUM PLAN ATTACK

Phila. Port Fears Loss of Revenue On Imports

HARRISBURG, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Legislative opponents of Gov. Pinchot's liquor control program, bolstered by new protests, marshaled their forces today and brewed further trouble for the plan in many quarters.

Republican caucuses at Philadelphia and other centers during the week-end recess are expected to decide the immediate future of parts of the plan, but leaders are confident Monday's tests will find the opposition much stronger.

Objection to the plan from a new quarter came from the Philadelphia Business Progress Association yesterday.

In a letter to the Governor the association asserted the bill would close the Philadelphia port to large importations of liquor for consumption in other states.

It also declared the proposed $2 floor tax and the $1 tax on liquor manufactured after repeal would ruin distilleries in the state and send those industries and their payrolls to more liberal states.

Administration leaders feel sure the revenue bills will be sent back to the floor after committee hearings Monday, but are in doubt as to the fate of the measure to give the state a complete monopoly over the importation and sale of intoxicants.

Low Tax Plan to Cost Millions, O'Connor Says

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(INS.)—American liquor consumers will pay profiteering prices to the extent of $1,000,000,000 a year and the government will lose hundreds of millions in taxes under the low tax policy favored by the administration, Representative John J. O'Connor (Dem.), of New York, declared today.

O'Connor—who was a wet leader in the long congressional fight over prohibition—announced he would make a fight for high taxes on liquor.

Declaring the administration plan of a low tax to stop bootlegging is faulty, O'Connor proposed a tax of $8 a gallon, graded as to alcoholic content, and probably an excess profits tax as compared to the $2.50 a gallon tax frequently suggested.

He said:

"The figures are astounding as to how the American people will be mulcted for months. They are going to take the 4,000,000 available gallons of whisky and 'cut' it to make 40,000,000 gallons. They propose to sell that for $40 a case, which means $400 for the same thing they got $9 before prohibition."

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that is causing the rainy condition yesterday morning was centered north of Lake Superior yesterday morning and now it is over Quebec. It produced only light precipitation along the way and the skies are clearing this morning over the Lower Valley states as far east as Cincinnati. Another disturbance appears over Alberta and the far Northwest. A high has developed over the plateau section again and is spreading eastward over the plains states to the Mississippi River. It is attended by clear skies and about normal temperature. There is no indication of severely cold weather for the next several days.

Pinchots Take Air Tests, Governor, 68, Passes

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania's 68-year-old, energetic Governor, Gifford Pinchot, is a step nearer his desire to become a licensed airplane pilot.

He and his equally dynamic wife took the severe physical tests for a student pilot's license yesterday and despite his years, the Governor passed with flying colors.

Mrs. Pinchot, because of a slight defect in her left eye, must take the test again but she was assured her next attempt will be successful.

Whirled around in the "barany" chairs, they saw Pennsylvania, at least the immediate vicinity, from many unusual angles, went through a rigorous physical and an equally stiff mental test—and liked it.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of Pennsylvania's independent Republican governor, said that she has "just heard" that she will be a candidate for Governor.

She added:

"Of course, I have nothing to say about it—it was interesting news to me."

The name of the state's militantly-political First Lady has been mentioned several times recently as a possible successor to her husband, whose second term expires next year.

MYSTERY WOMAN GRILLED IN SAN JOSE KIDNAP SLAYING

'SPARE' MURDER TOOLS FISHED FROM BAY

Body of Young Store Executive Eludes Grappling Hooks

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Dragging for the body of Brooke L. Hart, in San Francisco Bay, near the spot where kidnapers allegedly hurled him from a bridge, was carried on with renewed hopes today.

Searchers increased their efforts after a cement block and a coil of wire were brought to the surface by grappling hooks. Officers quoted one of the two men accused of the crime as saying the cement and wire were "spare parts" cast aside at the scene of young Hart's final struggles for life.

The searchers were advised the kidnaper suspect said Hart, weighted down with blocks similar to the one found, was thrown from the bridge several hundred feet from where the cement and wire were tossed into the water.

MYSTERY WOMEN

James M. Holmes and Thomas H. Thurmond, who, authorities said, confessed to kidnaping and slaying the 22-year-old San Jose store executive in a $40,000 ransom plot, remained in the San Francisco City Prison.

While the search for Hart's body went forward, authorities continued to check on the recent activities of the two suspects, both members of respected San Jose families.

A woman, who authorities identified only as an acquaintance of Holmes, was questioned by Sheriff William Emig, of San Jose. Emig said he believed Holmes and his wife had separated recently because of another woman. The officer said he did not believe anyone except the two men was directly involved in the crime.

'LYNCH HIM!'

Cries of "Lynch him" were shouted by persons in a crowd gathered outside San Francisco Department of Justice headquarters as Thurmond, who had been taken there for questioning, was brought out to be returned to the prison last night.

Despite the cries, guards easily cleared a path through the crowd and Thurmond was hustled into an automobile and driven away. The two men were brought to San Francisco from San Jose after their arrest there to guard against possible mob action.

NATURAL POSE WINS FOR BOY

A natural and "nonchalant" pose has won fourth national prize of $10 and first local prize in the Children's National Photograph Contest for 2-year-old Thomas Hudson, Jr., of 4614 Sylvan avenue, Hazelwood.

The expression of a child's personality and character in the pictures counted for as much as beauty, according to the sponsor. And evidently boys expressed these attributes more strongly than girls, for both the first and second prize winners, R. C. Harris, Jr., of Kansas City, and Billy Rogers, of Corpus Christi, Tex., are boys.

Boy Cripple Sad On Birthday; Dog Lost

The only thing absent from Robert Thomas's thirteenth birthday party yesterday was his real pal, "Skippy." Skippy, a male Eskimo-Spitz, all white, with brown eyes and black nose, disappeared last Sunday and hasn't been seen since.

Robert, born a cripple, has never walked. He grieves over the loss of Skippy and wishes that anyone who sees his dog would return him to his home in Mifflin road, Lincoln place.

ARREST FATHER AFTER THREATS

J. A. Eckert, 34, of 920 Mellon street, was to be arraigned in East End Police Court today in connection with alleged threats to "kidnap" his daughter, Grace, 14, who lives with her grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Eckert, 6926 Standish street, Morningside.

One of several notes found in the mail box of Mrs. Eckert's home, police said, demanded $3,100 be left on the rear porch and threatened that Grace would be kidnaped on her way to school. Other notes threatened to bomb the house.

Eckert, a gravestone salesman, was arrested in Sharpsburg and held in the East End Police Station on a suspicious person charge.

LINKS KAMONS IN 125 'JOBS'

CLEVELAND, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Abe Redlich, who admits he has been involved in seven or eight arson plots, says Louis J. Kamons, of Pittsburgh, on trial on a charge of murder in the Ellington Apartment fire, participated in "about 125" incendiary schemes.

Redlich testified yesterday he gave Kamons a check for $100 in part payment for starting a fire in Rankin, Pa.

DRAGON FLOAT IN SANTA FETE

Floats depicting nursery rhymes, including a dragon 24 feet long and 16 feet high, will mark Pittsburgh's 'Santa Claus" parade, sponsored by business and civic organizations of the city, next Saturday.

Mummers and drum and bugle corps will compete for prizes. Frank W. Shea is director of the parade committee.

The Greentree drum and bugle corps of 36 pieces is the latest organization to enter competition for the $50 prize offered for organizations in this class.

Director Frank W. Shea announced last night that, owing to the length of the march through downtown streets, no child under 7 years old would be permitted to enter the contest offered for the best costumes.

PITT STUDENTS FIGHT BAN ON CANDYMAN

Aged Squatter Ordered From Campus by School Officials

University of Pittsburgh students continued to circulate petitions today seeking to have the university department of buildings and grounds cancel an ouster order effective January 1, which has been handed "Dad" Frank Pryer, candyman on the Cathedral of Learning seventh floor.

"Dad," the students protest, is almost 70, and he earns his salt. He gives good service, they claim in their petition. He sweeps the seventh floor hall. He is well liked by all. And he has Pitt spirit. His coat is a Pitt jacket, emblazoned on the back with a golden Panther,

UNIVERSITY RULINGS

The university counters that only student-operated stands are allowed on the campus. Such student organizations as the Y. W. and Y. M. C. A., the Women's Athletic Association, and the Women's Glee Club maintain stands now. Pryer is the only exception.

As he admits himself, he is only a squatter in the cathedral. He says:

"I came up here almost three years ago. I used to sell apples and candy outside until one day Big Ed, the cathedral elevator man, told me that the superintendent said it would be all right for me to come inside."

FUTURE UNCERTAIN

"Dad" doesn't know just what he will do after the first of the year. He owes back rent for his room at 1919 Fifth avenue, and the $3 he makes on good days had to pay for his wife's funeral a year or so ago.

Before he came to Pitt, he was unemployed for six years. He is a laborer by trade and, as he says:

"There don't seem to be much demand for laborin' men these days."

RINGLING BARES LOSS OF CIRCUS

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—John Ringling, owner of the nation's largest circuses, testified in a Brooklyn Federal Court yesterday that he had signed over all his assets, including his circus stock and collection of paintings, to William M. Greve, president of New York Investors, Inc., in July, 1932, because he had defaulted on an interest payment on a loan.

Ringling said he was ill at the time in a Coney Island hotel with a fever of 104 degrees. Ringling said in a bankruptcy hearing:

"I want you to know that Greve said 'put all your assets in a bag and give them to me.'

"They put me in a wheel chair and brought me to another room, and, over the protests of my nurse, I signed a paper and gave the New York Investors all my assets."

Closely Questioned

FRIEDA WILHELMINA WELTZ, 43 . . . MURDER DEFENDANT

Miss Weltz, the former Connellsville nurse on trial at Santa Cruz, Cal., for the slaying of her former employer, rich Francis J. M. Grace, closely cross-examined on the witness stand on her story that he had drugged and attacked her before he was fatally shot.

Nurse Unshaken in Story Of Capitalist's Killing

Miss Weltz Faces Further Grilling In Trial

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Nov. 18.—(AP.)—The trial of Frieda Wilhelmina Weltz, charged with murder for the fatal shooting of Francis J. M. Grace, retired capitalist, will be resumed here Monday.

Miss Weltz, formerly employed by Grace as his nurse, was still being cross-examined as court adjourned yesterday. She remained firm in her claim the shooting was accidental and repeated her charge that Grace had attacked her and then refused to aid her after her health was ruined.

District Attorney Frank J. Murphy drew from the 43-year-old nurse an admission that she asked Grace for $300 just before the shooting. She explained she wanted the sum so that she could go "to some quiet place for a few months' rest."

She insisted the pistol, which she said she brought with her to end her own life if Grace refused to help her, accidentally went off as she drew it from her purse.

Miss Weltz said in reply to cross-questioning by District Attorney J. Frank Murphy:

"I did not aim or anything. I guess the gun was in may hand. I was trying to shoot myself."

Murphy asked:

"Your quarrel with Grace was over money?"

Miss Weltz answered:

"I merely asked him to help me regain my health. I felt he owed it to me. It was because of his attack that I lost my health and could not work."

Attorney John Duggan, Jr., of Pittsburgh, is Miss Weltz's chief counsel.

WIFE'S GRAVE SUICIDE SCENE

Beside the grave of his wife in Russell Cemetery, North Braddock, John Walters, 61, fired a bullet into his head, according to a morgue report.

With a casual remark that his wife, Mrs. Walters, had been burried just eight months ago to the day, Walters yesterday quietly departed from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Anna Kenak, 1202 Electric avenue, North Braddock, where he made his home. He didn't return, and his daughter worried.

Meanwhile George Klein, also of North Braddock, strolling through the cemetery, heard a shot and came across Walters slumped over his wife's grave. Beside him was a new revolver.

Man Dies Outside Office of Doctor

George Smith, 55, of 67 Vilsack street, Etna, fell dead last night in front of the office of Dr. C. S. Cain, 21 Grant avenue, Etna, the coroner's office reported.

COUNTY AUTO CRASHES INTO AMBULANCE

Patient, Wife and Girl Hurt; Undertaker, Driver Escape

An ambulance making an emergency run to the Presbyterian Hospital with a patient, cruashed with a county-owned car at Federal street and Montgomery avenue last night, slightly injuring three occupants of the ambulance.

The ambulance, wriven by Homer N. Oakley, North Side undertaker, was speeding west in Montgomery avenue, and crossed Federal street against a red light, but with the siren shrieking, Oakley explained today.

PATIENT HURT

It was struck and turned around by a county detective car driven by John E. Barnett, chauffeur, police reported. The car is assigned to District Attorney A. T. Park, but not used by him, he said today.

The patient, Nils Swanson, 66, of 5121 West Penn place, being taken to the hospital for an abdominal operation, his wife, Anna, 59, and daughter, Eva, 24, suffered cuts from flying glass. Both drivers were ordered to report to Traffic Court.

A mother and her three small daughters were injured, one seriously, in a three-cornered automobile crash in the Boulevard of the Allies and Pride street last night.

FELLS OFFICER

A passenger in one of the machines fled after felling Motorcycle Patrolman George Wood as he and the three drivers were entering the emergency room of Mercy Hospital. Learning the identity of the alleged assailant, who, police say, apparently had been drinking, they instituted a search for him.

The injured were: Mrs. Theresa Carlini, 34, of 701 Hazelwood avenue, and her daughters, Frances, 11; Rose Ann, 3, and Norma, 2. Rose Ann suffered a probable skull fracture, the mother a broken nose and lacerations, and the other two children cuts and bruises.

ONE DRIVER JAILED

Edward Huntt, 39, of Hampton Hall, North Dithridge street, was lodged in the Center Avenue Police Station on a charge of violation of the automobile laws. Police said it was Huntt's companion who struck Patrolman Wood.

An automobile which Huntt was driving sideswiped one driven by Harry Half, of 120 East Eighth avenue, Homestead, and then collided with another operated by Mrs. Carlini's husband, Ieomzio Carlini, police said. The drivers escaped injury.

Mark Flaherty, 26, of Center avenue, Verona, died last night in West Penn Hospital, the second fatality caused by an automobile accident in Bigelow boulevard near the Bloomfield Bridge Thursday night.

VERONA MAN KILLED

Homer Smiley, 33, of R. D. 1, Verona, was killed when the automobile skidded on the icy boulevard and struck a pole. Three other occupants of the car were injured. They were George Zimmerman, 28, of Oakmont, taken to West Penn Hospital, and H. D. Wilson, 24, of Verona, and John O'Connell, 29, former Pittsburgh Pirate catcher, of Verona, in St. Francis Hospital.

Kenneth Moore, 23, of New Kensington, the driver, escaped injury, police said.

Two girls were injured, one seriously, when the machine in which they were riding crashed into a safety zone at Sixth street and Fifth avenue, New Kensington, last night, according to a police report.

Helen Barch, 20, of 17 Center street, Natrona, suffered severe head lacerations, and Helen Sherman, 20 of Pond street, Natrona, suffered a probable fracture of the jaw. Each lost several teeth.

Police said the girls were passengers in the machine of Harry G. Yingling, of 252 North Charles street, New Kensington.

SUGGESTS CURB IN SCHENLEY

Improvements in Schenley Park to eliminate a traffic hazard and construction of paths on Bigelow boulevard, with the idea of beautifying that thoroughfare, were proposed today to the Department of Public Works by Leo Lehman, of May, Stern & Co.

In a letter to Edward G. Lang, director of the department, Lehman said some thought should be given to projects other than "merely an excuse for jobs."

He proposed the construction of a high curb in Schenley Park from the merry-go-round to Panther Hollow Bridge to safeguard motorists.

CHILD'S CRIES SAVE LIFE

A 7-year-old McKeesport girl, whose dress ignited while she played in the home of a neighbor in the rear of the McKeesport fire station, today owed her life to the screams of her playmate and a fireman in the station.

As Margaret Kotrozo, of 219 Strawberry street, played with Dorothy Pollackeck, 7, of North Diamond street, she backed into an open stove. Screams from the children attracted Dorothy's mother, Mrs. Jennie Pollackeck, and Walter McInerney, the fireman, who extinguished the flames.

Margaret was taken to the McKeesport Hospital, where her condition is said to be critical.

500-POUND SAFE FOILS THIEF

It was a man-sized job undertaken by a sneak thief when he attempted to remove the safe from a Gulf Refining service station at Ohio and Grant streets, Millvale, last night, police said.

Smashing a large glass window, police said, he laboriously lugged the 500-pound safe to the window, only to be frightened by a passerby. A broad trail of blood attested to his flight through the window, police said.

William Cavanaugh, 28, of Stanton avenue, Millvale, was arrested by Police Lieut. Leo Klever a short time later, when, police said, he was found in a parked automobile on the Allegheny River bank with a badly lacerated hand.

Cavanaugh denied knowledge of the robbery attempt.

Church Rioters Freed, Trial Costs Divided

A jury in Criminal Court last night returned verdicts of acquittal to all defendants in two riot cases which resulted in a split in the congregation of the Slovak Lutheran Church, Duquesne, last July 2, and directed that the costs be borne equally between the defandants and prosecutors.

A charge of disturbing a religious meeting, brought by the faction headed by the Rev. A. D. Dianiska, was dismissed. The jury placed one fourth the costs upon the prosecution and three-fourths upon the defendants in the three assault and battery cases brought by the faction headed by the Rev. John Murcek.

The case had been on trial before Judge J. Frank Graff, of Armstrong County, since Thursday. The verdicts were reached an hour and a half after the jury had retired at 4:15 p. m. yesterday, and were taken by Judge James H. Gray in the absence of Judge Graff.

Judge Gray approved an agreement of counsel that no witness fees be permitted. This resulted in a saving of about $500.

Attorney O. K. Eaton represented the Rev. Mr. Dianiska and 46 defendants, and Attorney William F. Ewing, on the other side, represented 25.

The trouble started when members of the congregation, headed by the Rev. Mr. Murcek, was alleged to have broken up a religious service being conducted by the Rev. Mr. Dianiska, and ousted the latter.

Slap Suit 'Piffle,' Says Mary; Meets Bannister

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Mary McCormic, opera singer and self-styled "One-Swing Kid," arriving at Newark Airport from Los Angeles, derided a $1,000,000 suit brought by Grace Williams, writer, whom the opera star struck on the jaw, as "mere piffle."

Miss McCormic left Los Angeles hurriedly to escape, she said, a summons in the suit against her. She said:

"That's a lot of money she's trying to get out of me. I'd like to have that much myself.

"I am poo-poohing the suit. That suit is strictly the piffle. All she's trying to do is get herself some publicity. Anyone who would sue me for that amount is certainly an optimist.

"As for the slap I'll fight any woman my weight or double my weight when they go around trying to peddle scandle about me. You can call me 'the One-Swing Kid' from now on."

She would comment no further on the suit brought by Miss Williams, biographer of the opera singer's former husband, Prince Serge Mdivani, who began suit in Los Angeles for $1 actual and $1,000,000 punitive damages.

Harry Bannister, former husband of Ann Harding, movie celebrity, met the diva last night at the airport and they motored to New York.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION HOLDS WEEK-END CONFERENCE

CHINA MISSION WORKER TO SPEAK

The Congregational Young People's Union of Western Pennsylvania, of which Herbert L. Gwyer is president, will conclude a week-end conference at the German Evangelical Protestant Church tomorrow.

Miss Lucy M. Eldridge, of Dayton, O., executive secretary of the Congregational Education Society, will be in charge of the conference, and the Rev. Leonard M. Outerbridge, of Boston, missionary and educator in North China, will preach tomorrow morning.

Round-table discussions on youth problems will be led by the Rev. Frank Edwin Smith, of the First Unitarian Church, Pittsburgh; E. Kingman Eberhart, of the University of Pittsburgh; Charles T. Douds and Miss Stelle Minnemeyer.

Tomorrow afternoon the conference will conclude with a communion service conducted by the Rev. Dr. C. A. Voss.

Mr. Outerbridge, for six years under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, is the most important personage at the conference, in view of his international experience and cosmopolitan attitude toward youth problems.

In the section of China where the Rev. Outerbridge served, he introduced variations of drought-resisting grains which greatly increased crops of the arid regions. In 1929 the American board lent him to the China International Famine Relief Commission, and for two years he was honorary agricultural secretary.

During years of civil war in China, he crossed No Man's Land three times in the interests of the Christian movement, covering many miles each year on foot or mule back. He learned to understand the Chinese farmer, and to visualize what scientific agriculture can do for the people of China.

The Story of David -:- CHAPTER III -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

While their armies were drawn up in battle array, Goliath of Gath went out of the camp of the Philistines and stood and cried unto the armies of Israel: "Choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me." And the height of Goliath was about nine feet.

One day David rose up early, as Jesse, his father, had commanded him, and, leaving his sheep with a keeper, he came to their trench as the hosts of Israel were going forth to fight. There he left his carriage and ran into the army, and he found his brethren and saluted them.

As David was talking with his brethren, Goliath, the champion of the Philistines, aagin drew near to the army of Israel, as he had done every morning and evening for forty days, and defied them to choose a man to meet him in single combat, crying out: "If he be able to fight with me and to kill me, then will we be your servants; but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us." And David heard these words of Goliath, and saw that all the men of Israel feared the Philistine giant.

ECCLESIASTICAL PAINTING TO BE EXHIBITED

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—A picturization of Christ by an American artist as a blue-eyed, golden-haired, virile person is to be exhibited abroad this fall and winter.

Dr. William F. Sunday, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Brooklyn, announced today that during his recent trip to Europe he had arranged for showings of the painting in leading cathedrals of England and Germany.

The painting, known as "Nazarene" or "Christ Triumphant," is the work of Col. H. Stanley Todd, portrait artist.

Dr. Sunday reported that leading clergymen in England and Germany expressed themselves as grateful for the opportunity to see the portrait, which will be shown under the auspices of the Universal Christian Council, whose American section is the Federal Council of Churches' department on relations with churches abroad.

Col. Todd's work is now being displayed in large cities throughout the country in connection with an interdenominational missionary campaign instituted by the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

Upon the conclusion of that campaign, Dr. Sunday said:

"It will be taken to Germany and placed in a Berlin cathedral. Later it is to be shown throughout Germany in connection with observances of the four hundred fiftieth anniversary of Martin Luther's birth."

The artist, who served with the Intelligence Division of the American staff during the war, has said the idea of a blond, manly Christ had been in his mind for many years, but that the actual painting took only one day.

We Know Them Now in Spite of Those Whiskers

—By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER—

Looks like we have recognized the Russians at last. Well, shave 'em and send 'em in.

Things ain't been so hot between Washington and Moscow since the Czar went bobbing-for-apples in a well.

Funny thing about Russia is that they could buy our merchandise. But weren't welcome in the store.

We gave 'em credit. But didn't trust 'em.

Hope the recognition will do Litvinoff more good than it did Prince Mike Romanoff, the last of the Gergusons. We visited Mike in the federal play pen last spring and the royal Moscovite complained:

"I'm being recognized too often."

Intimate Details Of Negotiations Set Forth

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Following is the text of letters exchanged between President Roosevelt and Maxim Litvinoff on Russian recognition:

"My dear Mr. President:

"I have the honor to inform you that coincident with the establishment of diplomatic relations between our two governments it will be the fixed policy of the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics:

"1—To respect scrupulously the indisputable right of the United States to order its own life within its own jurisdiction in its own way and to refrain from interfering in any manner in the internal affairs of the United States, its territories or possessions.

INIMICAL ACTS

"2—To refrain, and to restrain all persons in government service and all organizations of the government or under its direct or indirect control, including organizations in receipt of any financial assistance from it, from any act overt or covert liable in any way whatsoever to injure the tranquility, prosperity, order, or security of the whole or any part of the United States, its territories or possessions, and, in particular, from any act tending to incite or encourage armed intervention, or any agitation or propaganda having as an aim, the violation of the territorial integrity of the United States, its territories or possessions, or the bringing about by force of a change in the political or social order of the whole or any part of the United States, its territories or possessions.

TERRITORIAL INTEGRITY

"3—Not to permit the formation or residence on its territory of any organization or group—and to prevent the activity on its territory of any organization or group, or of representatives or officials of any organization or group—which makes claim to be the government of, or makes attempt upon the territorial integrity of, the United States, its territories or possessions; not to form, subsidize, support or permit on its territory military organizations or groups having the aim of armed struggle against the United States, its territories or possessions, and to prevent any recruiting on behalf of such organizations and groups.

"4—Not to permit the formation or residence on its territory of any organization or group—and to prevent the activity on its territory of any organization or group, or of representatives or officials of any organization or group—which has as an aim the overthrow or the preparation for the overthrow of, or the bringing about by force of a change in, the political or social order of the whole or any part of the United States, its territories or possessions.

"Mr. Dear Mr. Litvinoff:

'My Dear Mr. President—'

MAXIM LITVINOFF . . . THE SOVIET'S FOREIGN COMMISSAR

Religious Liberty

"My dear Mr. Litvinoff:

"As I have told you in our recent conversations, it is my expectation that after the establishment of normal relations between our two countries many Americans will wish to reside temporarily or permanently within the territory of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and I am deeply concerned that they should enjoy in all respects the same freedom of conscience and religious liberty which they enjoy at home.

"As you well know, the government of the United States, since the foundation of the republic, has always striven to protect its nationals, at home and abroad, in the free exercise of liberty of conscience and religious worship, and from all disability or persecution on account of their religious faith or worship. And I need scarcely point out that the rights enumerated below are those enjoyed in the United States by all citizens and foreign nationals and by American nationals in all the major countries of the world.

CEREMONIAL RITES

"The government of the United States, therefore, will expect that nationals of the United States of America within the territory of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics will be allowed to conduct without annoyance or molestation of any kind religious services and rites of a ceremonial nature, including baptismal, confirmation, communion, marriage and burial rites, in the English language, or in any other language which is customarily used in the practice of the religious faith to which they belong, in churches, houses or other buildings appropriate for such service, which they will be given the right and opportunity to lease, erect or maintain in convenient situations.

"We will expect that nationals of the United States will have the right to collect from their co-religionists and to receive from abroad voluntary offerings for religious purposes; that they will be entitled without restriction to impart religious instruction to their children, either singly or in groups, or to have such instruction imparted by persons whom they may employ for such purpose; that they will be given and protected in the right to bury their dead according to their religious customs in suitable and convenient places established for that purpose, and given the right and opportunity to lease, lay out, occupy and maintain such burial grounds subject to reasonable sanitary laws and regulations.

"We will e[illegible]t that religious groups or [illegible]egations composed of nationals of the United States of America in the territory of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics will be given the right to have their spiritual needs ministered to by clergymen, priests, rabbis or other ecclesiastical functionaries who are nationals of the United States of America, and that such clergymen, priests, rabbis or other ecclesiastical functionaries will be protected from all disability or persecution and will not be denied entry into the territory of the Soviet Union because of their ecclesiastical status.

"I am, my dear Mr. Litvinoff,
"Very sincerely yours,
"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Litvinoff's Reply

"My dear Mr. President:

"In reply to your letter of November 16, 1933, I have the honor to inform you that the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as a fixed policy accords the nationals of the United States within the territory of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics the following rights referred to by you:

"1—The right to 'free exercise of liberty of conscience and religious worship' and protection 'from all disability or persecution on account of their religious faith or worship.'

"This right is supported by the following laws and regulations existing in the various republics of the union:

"'Every person may profess any religion or none. All restrictions of rights connected with the profession of any belief whatsoever, or with the non-profession of any belief, are annulled.' (Decree of January 23, 1918, Art. 3).

"'Within the confines of the Soviet Union it is prohibited to issue any local laws or regulations restricting or limiting freedom of conscience, or establishing privileges or preferential rights of any kind based upon the religious profession of any person.' (Decree of January 23, 1918, Art. 2).

"2—The right to 'conduct without annoyance or molestation of any kind religious services and rites of a ceremonial nature."

CITES LAWS

"This right is supported by the following laws:

"'A free performance of religious rites is guaranteed as long as it does not interfere with public order and is not accompanied by interference with the rights of citizens of the Soviet Union. Local authorities possess the right in such cases to adopt all necessary measures to preserve public order and safety.' (Decree of January 23, 1918, Art. 5).

"'Interference with the performance of religious rites, in so far as they do not endanger public order and are not accompanied by infringements on the rights of others, is punishable by compulsory labor for a period up to six months.' (Criminal code, Art. 127).

"3—'The right and opportunity to lease, erect or maintain in convenient situations' churches, houses or other buildings appropriate for religious purposes.

"This right is supported by the following laws and regulations:

"'Believers belonging to a religious society with the object of making provision for their requirements in the matter of religion; may lease under contract, free of charge, from the subdistrict or district executive committee or from the town Soviet, special buildings for the purpose of worship and objects intended exclusively for the purposes of their cult.' (Decree of April 8, 1929, Art. 10.)

RELIGIOUS MEETINGS

"'Furthermore, believers, who have formed a religious society or a group of believers may use for religious meetings other buildings which have been placed at their disposal on lease by private persons or by local soviets and executive committees. All rules established for houses of worship are applicable to these buildings. Contracts for the use of such buildings shall be concluded by individual believers who will be held responsible for their execution. In addition, these buildings must comply with the sanitary and technical building regulations.' (Decree of April 8, 1929, Art. 10.)

Communications Go Over Points At Issue

"'The place of worship and religious property shall be handed over for the use of believers forming a religious society under a contract concluded in the name of the competent district executive committee or town soviet by the competent administrative department or branch, or directly by the sub-district executive committee.' (Decree of April 8, 1929, Art. 15.)

"'The construction of new places of worship may take place at the desire of religious societies, provided that the usual technical building regulations and the special regulations laid down by the People's Commissariat for Internal Affairs are observed.' (Decree of April 8, 1928, Article 45.)

"4—'The right to collect from their co-religionists voluntary offerings for religious purposes.'

COLLECTION RIGHT

"This right is supported by the following law:

"'Members of groups of believers and religious societies may raise subscriptions among themselves and collect voluntary offerings, both in the place of worship itself and outside it, but only amongst the members of the religious association concerned and only for purposes connected with the upkeep of the place of worship and the religious property, for the engagement of ministers of religion and for the expenses of their executive body. Any form of forced contribution in aid of religious associations is punishable under the criminal code.' (Decree of April 8, 1929, Article 54.)

"5—Right to 'impart religious instruction to their children either singly or in groups or to have such instruction imparted by persons whom they may employ for such purpose.'

"The right is supported by the following law:

"The school is separated from the church. Instruction in religious doctrines is not permitted in any governmental and common schools, nor in private teaching institutions where general subjects are taught. Persons may give or receive religious instruction in a private manner. (Decree of January 23, 1918, Art. 9.)

FREEDOM OF CONSCIENCE

"Furthermore, the Soviet government is prepared to include in a consular convention to be negotiated immediately following the establishment of relations between our two countries provisions in which nationals of the United States shall be granted rights with reference to freedom of conscience and the free exercise of religion which shall not be less favorable than those enjoyed in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics by nationals of the nation most favored in this respect. In this connection, I have the honor to call to your attention Article 9 of the treaty between Germany and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, signed at Moscow October 12, 1925, which reads as follows:

"'Nationals of each of the contracting parties . . . Shall be entitled to hold religious services in churches, houses or other buildings, rented, according to the laws of the country, in their national language or in any other language which is customary in their religion. They shall be entitled to bury their dead in accordance with their religious practice in burial-grounds established and maintained by them with the approval of the competent authorities, so long as they comply with the police regulations of the other party in respect of buildings and public health.'

"Furthermore, I desire to state that the rights specified in the above paragraphs will be granted to American nationals immediately upon the establishment of relations between our two countries.

"Finally, I have the honor to inform you that the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, while reserving to itself the right of refusing visas to Americans desiring to enter the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics on personal grounds, does not intend to base such refusals on the fact of such persons having an ecclesiastical status.

"I am, my dear Mr. President,
"Very sincerely yours,
"MAXIM LITVINOFF."

Economic Espionage

In reply to a question of the President in regard to prosecutions for economic espionage, Mr. Litvinoff gave the following explanation:

"The widespread opinion that the dissemination of economic information from the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is allowed only in so far as this information has been published in newspapers or magazines, is erroneous.

"The right to obtain economic information is limited in the Union of Soviet Socialistic Republics, as in other countries, only in the case of business and production secrets and in the case of the employment of forbidden methods (bribery, theft, fraud, etc.) to obtain such information.

"The category of business and production secrets naturally includes the official economic plans, insofar as they have not been made public, but not individual reports concerning the production conditions and the general conditions of individual enterprises.

"The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has also no reason to complicate or hinder the critical examination of its economic organization. It naturally followed from this that every one has the right to talk about economic matters or to receive information about such matters in the Union, insofar as the information for which he has asked or which has been imparted to him is not such as may not, on the basis of special regulations issued by responsible officials or by the appropriate state enterprises, be made known to outsiders. (This principle applies primarily to information concerning economic trends and tendencies.)"

Newspaper Freedom Assured in Code

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The newspaper code is completed and it contains absolute safeguards against all threats to a free press.

It is, in fact, a code in name only, and will automatically dissolve at the first movement toward licensing or injunction.

Elisha Hanson, counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, made these declarations in saying the proposed code would be submitted early next week and could go to the President for approval as soon as the NRA cared to send it.

Hanson said it was made plain to NRA officials that the code must be accepted in this form and with these safeguards or it would be at once withdrawn. He held a final conference last night with Deputy Administrator Lindsay Rogers, who presided over the hearings, and expressed confidence the code would be speedily approved with all its safeguards.

He referred to an editorial Friday in the Hearst newspapers calling on Recovery Administrator Johnson to remove the shackles of the license system from the press to insure its continued freedom. Hanson said:

"Mr. Hearst is absolutely right and the code as submitted will fully protect the freedom of the press which he is championing."

Police Cleared in Death Of Injured Prisoner

Unsuccessful efforts to obtain the services of three county doctors to attend Patrick Barry, and to get him into a hospital, were made 24 hours after he had been held in North Braddock Police Station, police testified last night at a public investigation of the death of Barry before North Braddock Council.

As the hearing ended Burgess G. F. Mitchell said he was positive the North Braddock police had not been guilty of negligence.

Barry died in St. Francis Hospital, the Coroner reported, from a fractured skull, suffered, it was brought out at the inquiry, in a fall in Fourth street, North Braddock, Friday, November 10.

Clyde Barefoot, 18, of 2104 Delaware avenue, North Braddock, saw him fall, and called police, he testified last night. Vernon and Paul Harrity, brothers, of 1000 Fourth street, brought him to the police station, unconscious, they said.

The boys called at the station and told the sergeant they had a drunk in the car, Patrolman Fred Burdell testified. The officer said he threw Barry over his shoulder and carried him into a cell.

Police Chief Willis H. Harker told of his futile efforts to obtain the services of doctors to attend Barry.

The Burgess testified he had taken Barry to Braddock General Hospital last Saturday night, only to have the institution refuse to admit the patient on the grounds that the, had no beds.

A letter from the hospital, explaining the hospital's stand in the matter, was read. It said the only accommodation they could have offered was a cot, which would not have been advisable in the case. They made it plain that another hospital had been suggested in the interest of the patient.

The Burgess then testified he had taken Barry to St. Francis Hospital, where he died four days later.

FAVORED DISHES EXCHANGED BY HOUSEWIVES

Flour, salt, butter, sugar, eggs and the other groceries that we find on the pantry shelves look very much alike in their store forms. It's only when they're combined that they give us the something different we call our prepared foods.

Some women have the knack of combining ingredients so that the result is an appetizing dish which wins the approval of their friends. So that you may take advantage of each particular housewife's specialty, Prudence Penny has, for the last few months, been conducting her prize recipe contest.

Day by day you've got other women's best. Now send yours in. The contest is open to everyone and for those 11 recipes daily judged the best Prudence Penny will send out 10 $1 checks and one check for $5.

If you'd like to be on the receiving end of the awards, send in your best recipes, the ones you know other housewives will want to use, to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Miss McLaughlin Weds in Regal Ceremony

A very lovely and regal ceremony took place at 7:30 o'clock last evening in the Second United Presbyterian Church, of Wilkinsburg, when Miss Kathleen McLaughlin became the bride of Elmer Carl Hanks. The bride and all her attendants carried velvet and taffeta muffs to which were attached sprays of flowers. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs Howard Leslie McLaughlin, of Wilkinsburg, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. William Payne, of Knoxville, Tenn.

Officiating was the Rev. H. H. McConnell, before the altar banked with cibotium ferns and bamboo, and urns of white chysanthemums, lighted by cathedral tapers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a sheath gown of white velvet, made with a high cowl neck, long train extending from the hemline, and dolman sleeves which were shirred from shoulder to wrist, and in back the bodice was slit from the neckline to the waist. Her veil of tulle extended to the knees in front and the length of the dress train in back, giving the "halo" effect. On her muff of white velvet were orchids and lilies of the valley.

The gowns of her attendants were made alike with brief trains, low decolletages and pointed and stiffened wings of the velvet lined with taffeta extending out over the shoulders. There were small velvet covered buttons from the waistline down the backs of the skirts. They carried flat velvet muffs lined with taffeta, to which were pinned sprays of white chrysanthemums tied with contrasting velvet ribbons.

Mrs. Walter Wilkison, the matron of honor, wore orchid velvet with a tiny Juliet cap of velvet and tulle and carried an orchid muff; Miss Jean Smith, maid of honor, wore Alice blue with a coral cap and carried a coral muff; the bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Goodwin, Miss Lucretia Meyers, Miss Ruth McCullough and Miss Mildred Morrow, all wore coral velvet with blue caps and muffs.

The bride's mother wore a gown of eggplant velvet having crystal buttons the length of the dress in back. She wore orchids.

The best man was William Chapman, of New York and Denver, and serving as ushers were Lyman Horton, Rudolph Summerfeld, Harry Thomas, Byron McLaughlin and Ralph Carey.

There was a reception in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel, where the bride's table was banked with chrysanthemums. Mr. Hanks and his bride are honeymooning in the East and will be at home in Washington avenue, Edgewood, when they return.

World of Music Pays Tribute To Mrs. Martin on Her 70th Birthday

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

If Mrs. James Stephen Martin never knew before just what her fellow townspeople think of her, she must have a pretty good idea today. More than 200 of them gathered at dinner in the Twentieth Century Club last night to celebrate her seventieth birthday (although nobody believes Mrs. Martin knows how to subtract) and her 40 years as an integral part in Pittsburgh's music life. Everybody—well, almost everybody—who was anybody in the local music world, was there and needless to say it was a gala occasion.

Even Harvey Gaul, who was the toastmaster and talked about "little Annie Martin" and made the speakers pleasantly uncomfortable with his unique introductions, grew serious for one moment. That was when he said this was the first time such a tribute had ever been paid a musician in Pittsburgh and that the only occasion which even approximated it was the farewell Mr. and Mrs. Martin had given for Charles Wakefield Cadman when he left Pittsburgh. Mrs. David V. Murdoch, president of the Tuesday Musical Club, was chairman.

There were speeches, of course, many of them, all lauding Mrs. Martin's work and personality and all showing the affectionate esteem in which her husband's memory is still held. And there were bouquets, gifts from organizations and individuals, and a fitted bag from the dinner committee and telegrams from all over the country.

Lewis E. Huseman read John A. Bell's tribute from the First Presbyterian Church, where Mrs. Martin sang when she first came to Pittsburgh; greetings were brought by Miss Georgina Negley from the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, where both Mr. and Mrs. Martin were, she singing and he directing.

And there were other brief talks by Miss Beulah Kennard, Mrs. Martin's sister from Philadelphia; Miss Anne Griffiths, Dr. Will Earhart, Mrs. William Maclay Hall, John L. Porter, Mrs. Taylor Allderdice and Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, to whom was given the honor of presenting the honor guest. And the marvel of the whole evening was the completely beautiful speech Mrs. Martin made.

Of course there was music, gorgeous assembly singing led by Percy Dorrington; Mr. Gaul's "Thou Art the Night Wind," by the Foster Singers; solos by John Dickson Fulton, Anne Woestehoff, Esther Edmundson Mohr and Ralph Maser, and Cadman's "Morning of the Year," which he dedicated to Mr. Martin, sung by Mrs. Mohr, Mrs. Woestehoff, Mr. Fulton and Cass Ward Whitney, and last of all, Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus," by a chorus that was recruited at the minute and directed by Ernest Lunt.

Besides Miss Kennard, Mrs. Martin's other two sisters, Mrs. Robert Lee Wilson, from "Woodside," Bel Air, Md., and Mrs. Samuel Langtree Haynes, from Columbus, were in the audience, as was Mrs. Edward B. Lee, whose father, the late George H. Wilson, persuaded the Martins that Pittsburgh needed them.

NRA Overlooks Basic Problems, Club Told

Not only does the NRA overlook basic problems, but it intensifies the very tendencies in capitalism which produced the present day state of the world, said John Strachey, former Labor member of Parliament, before the Friday Morning Club yesterday.

In his talk on "Can World Capitalism Recover?" at Carnegie Music Hall, the English author-speaker said recovery must be to a minimum of security and opportunity for the majority of human beings and from the present state of struggle for actual necessities.

The three tendencies of capitalism which he outlined in great detail and which he said have brought the world to its present state are expansion of credit without plan and without regard to what was needed; the tendency towards monopoly, concentration of capital that was going on simultaneously with expansion; and the tendency towards mechanization, the increase of production power with decrease in staff power.

Calling attention to the fact that the United States is the only capitalistic government that has put forward a comprehensive recovery scheme, Mr. Strachey says he believes it will bring recovery only for a time because of its intensification of these three tendencies.

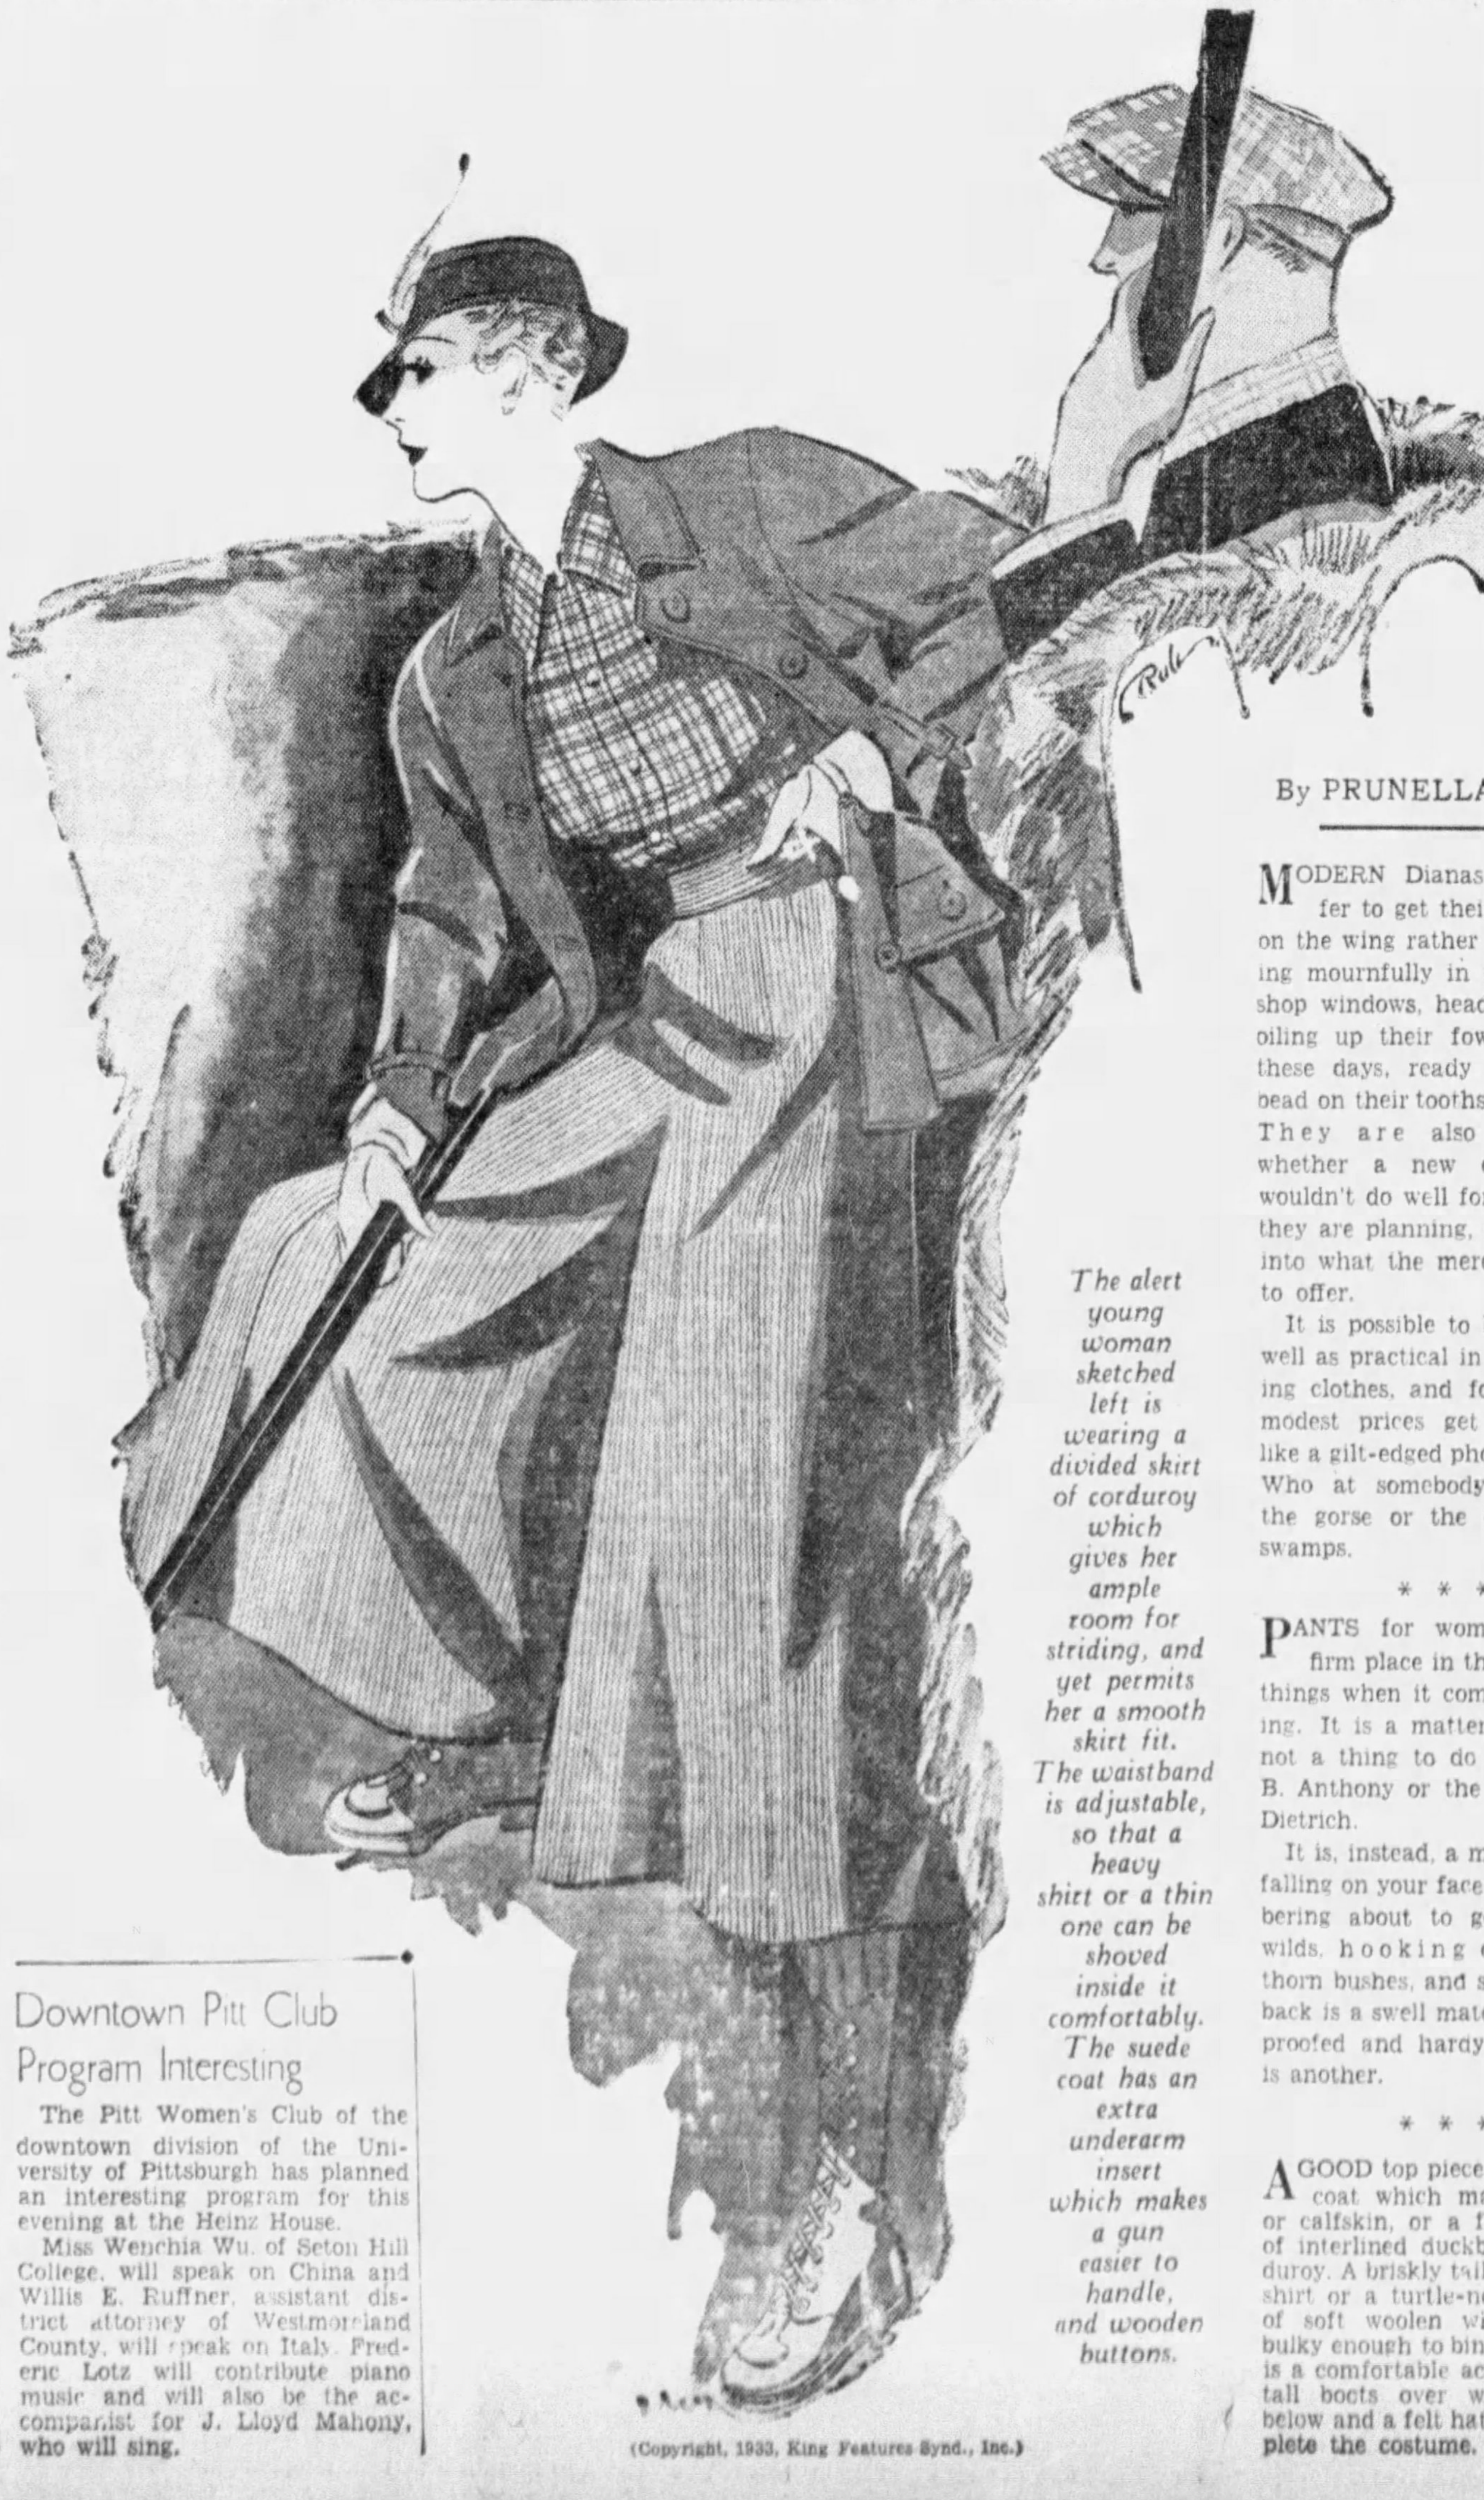
GUNNING FOR THE CORRECT CLOTHES



The alert young woman sketched left is wearing a divided skirt of corduroy which gives her ample room for striding, and yet permits her a smooth skirt fit. The waistband is adjustable, so that a heavy shirt or a thin one can be shoved inside it comfortably. The suede coat has an extra underarm insert which makes a gun easier to handle, and wooden buttons.

MODERN Dianas who prefer to get their partridges on the wing rather than hanging mournfully in the butcher shop windows, head down, are oiling up their fowling pieces these days, ready to draw a bead on their toothsome quarry. They are also wondering whether a new dud or so wouldn't do well for the forays they are planning, and looking into what the merchants have to offer.

It is possible to be smart as well as practical in one's hunting clothes, and for the most modest prices get oneself up like a gilt-edged photo of Who's Who at somebody's lodge in the gorse or the Carolina swamps.

PANTS for women have a firm place in the scheme of things when it comes to hunting. It is a matter which has not a thing to do with Susan B. Anthony or the lovely Miss Dietrich.

It is, instead, a matter of not falling on your face when clambering about to get into the wilds, hooking onto vicious thorn bushes, and so on. Duckback is a swell material, waterproofed and hardy. Corduroy is another.

* * *

A GOOD top piece is a leather coat which may be suede or calfskin, or a fabric model of interlined duckback or corduroy. A briskly tailored flannel shirt or a turtle-necked jersey of soft woolen which is not bulky enough to bind one's arms is a comfortable accessory, and tall boots over woolen socks below and a felt hat above complete the costume.

Ambridge Women To Hold 2-Day 'World's Fair'

An entertainment modeled after the Century of Progress Exposition will be held Thursday and Friday nights in the Eagles' Building, Ambridge, by the Ambridge Woman's Club. The women, who are calling the affair "Progress of Ambridge," have planned it as a benefit for local welfare work.

Entertainment in addition to that offered by the occupants of 51 booths will be band concerts, orchestra music, two floor shows and folk songs by a wandering minstrel in costume.

The New Kensington-Tarentum Council of Jewish Juniors will give a mid-season cabaret dance in the Elks' Home, New Kensington, Wednesday evening.

Downtown Pitt Club Program Interesting

The Pitt Women's Club of the downtown division of the University of Pittsburgh has planned an interesting program for this evening at the Heinz House.

Miss Wenchia Wu, of Seton Hill College, will speak on China and Willis E. Ruffner, assistant district attorney of Westmoreland County, will speak on Italy. Frederic Lotz will contribute piano music and will also be the accompanist for J. Lloyd Mahony, who will sing.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

The bouquet debutante Alice is carrying in the picture of her at the top of the page is made up of green orchids, white orchids and orchid orchids, together with gardenias. Her father sent it to her.

Among her many gift bouquets was an old-fashioned white one—there's always at least one white bouquet for a deb—with two stiff ruffles of lace about it. And the outer row of flowers were rosebuds, just a bit off white.

Perhaps it's making trouble in your home—spoiling your life. If so, you'll have an answer ready for Ralph. Or will you?

Dear Miss Robinson:

I wish you could give me some advice about a very serious problem. It is pretty complicated, and I don't know what to do. I seem to be between two fires.

I have been engaged to an awfully nice girl for almost a year. We intended to be married this year, but, due to conditions, we have not done so. I have been up against it helping out at home. I am the oldest of the family, and the rest of the children are still going to school. My father has not been working regularly, so things are pretty tight just now.

My girl friend lives at home and, not having any father, her oldest brother has been the sole support at their house for quite a while, due to the unemployment of a younger brother. She is out of work also.

Now this oldest brother of hers is also engaged. He has gone with the girl he is engaged to for three years. At the present time he finds himself in a position to get married if he didn't have such a burden at home—and the point is this:

He is making sarcastic remarks to my girl, about her either getting married or getting out of the house. I'm not supposed to know about this, but I do.

SORRY FOR GIRL

Now my intentions are good. I love the girl, and I would marry her tomorrow if I could. But I don't see why I should sacrifice my family in their need to please him.

My girl is pretty much upset about the whole thing, and is threatening that she will leave home. I don't think she should, while she has a mother, who certainly should have something to say about it, according to my way of thinking.

I sympathize with her, and try to comfort her, but, having my own troubles at home, I'm getting to the point where I am getting disgusted with the whole matter. I am just getting by on the rather small salary I am making, and I have no intention of getting married with things the way they are.

Should I leave my mother and father, in time of need, to marry a girl, just in order to please her selfish brother? I certainly don't intend to now, but I would like some advice on the subject. RALPH.

OVERLOOKING POINT

Plenty of problem, Ralph. And I'm going to ask the whole outfit to give you a hand in solving it. But first—a word with you, young man!

You seem to be overlooking one very vital part of the picture. You quite clearly perceive Big Brother's grouchiness and, perhaps, your own family's greediness. But your own complacent selfishness entirely escapes you.

Not by one word do you show any real concern for your sweetheart's miserable unhappiness and humiliation. Nor does the fact that you assumed certain responsibilities when you asked the girl to marry you seem to weigh upon you in the least. You are entirely concerned with your obligations to "your family"—and poor, dear Ralph himself!

If such is your "love and loyalty" to this girl now when you are supposed to be in the transports of love, what will they be when you're married?

Frankly, as a lover, you seem to me to be the world's worst toothache! And were I your sweetie I'd kiss you good-by so fast it'd blister. However, for the sake of braver, kinder lads than you, I'm passing the problem on.

So—what say, Big Family—If it's Sweetheart or Family—which should a real man choose.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Unexpected Slam

When a player makes a Slam bid as a sacrifice, it is rare indeed that he finds himself, at the end of the hand, writing a score below the line, as Contract players usually have a clear enough idea of the trick-taking powers of the combined hands before a Slam contract is undertaken to know whether or not they can take 12 of the 13 tricks. Sacrificial overbidding in Contract is unquestionably a paying policy provided a player limits the sacrifices he takes to hands where the penalties are not too great and where the opponents can do as well or better at their own best bids; but the fact remains that a sacrifice seldom turns out to be a real Slam.

North and South in the hand below felt quite well satisfied that East and West, who were vulnerable, could fulfill the contract they had undertaken, and thus when North made his sacrifice bid, it was with the full knowledge that a modest penalty, which seemed all that was probable in view of the partnership bidding, was well worth while.

West, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

North:
♠ 10 7
♡ J 9 8 3 2

West:
♠ K 9 2
♡ 10
◇ A K 7 5 3
♣ J 9 3 2

East:
♠ A Q 6 5 4 3
♡ Q
◇ Q J 9 2
♣ K 4

South:
♠ J 8
♡ A K 7 6 5 4
◇ 10 8 6 4
♣ 8

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	2 ♣	2 ♠	3 ♡
3 ♠	4 ♡	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	5 ♡	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	6 ♡	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

West's Opening bid was certainly a bedrock minimum, vulnerable, but from that point on the bidding proceeded naturally enough up to the point where North decided upon the sacrifice. As a matter or fact, East and West cannot make five spades if South, after opening his singleton club and ruffing the return of that suit, leads a diamond and gives North a ruff. Equally, an Opening lead of a diamond, which, it must be confessed, would be somewhat of a Double Dummy proposition, would defeat East's contract 2 tricks. However, all this involves rather difficult card reading and requires just the distribution that existed to bring it about.

North could not see these possibilities, and so chose to take what he considered would probably be a light penalty. West, with the Ace-King of diamonds, felt that his patience was being sorely tried and so doubled the six-heart bid.

That contract, it is, of course, apparent as the cards lie, is certain to be defeated if West opens a spade, but having as he thought the better Opening lead of the diamond King, he led that card, which was ruffed in the Dummy, and thereupon South took the remaining tricks.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding having gone:

North	East	South	West
2 ♡	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass

East, holding

♠ 7 6 ♡ Q 8 7 5 ◇ J 10 7 6 ♣ K 7 6

passed. What should East have done? Would you say that East lacked mental courage to bid?

Answer: East should have bid two notrump. West's Takeout Double of a two-bid should be strong, although it is obvious from the bidding that the two-bid as employed by North and South was not Forcing. East, holding one honor-trick plus, and being forced to make a bid at two in any case, is showing more than a minimum response, but not a very strong hand. Incidentally, it takes more courage to pass a Takeout Double, especially when the doubled contract will result in a game, if made, than to bid.

Companions His Own Age

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

The family of three had moved into a new neighborhood, and Bob, the eight-year-old son, didn't seem to get along so harmoniously there as he had in his old home playground.

All his playtimes ended in quarrels. Bob came home more often than not, with a frown on his forehead and a rebellious, angry feeling in his heart.

The mother couldn't figure out why her son, who had played nicely before, should suddenly be so thoroughly unhappy with the new companions.

She did a little inquiring, a good deal of silent observing when the children played in her yard and discovered that not one of them was as old as Bob.

At first this puzzled her. It would seem that such a condition would make for Bob's feeling superior and [illegible] the master of every [illegible] that arose.

As a matter of [illegible] that's exactly what it did, but the results of that feeling weren't particularly constructive nor happy for any of the children concerned.

Feeling older, wiser and more dominating, it was only a short time until Bob had communicated this attitude toward his companions and they resented it.

Bob was eternally showing them how a thing should be done. Bob made the rules. Bob supervised the carrying out of those rules. And the youngsters soon got tired of it.

When school time came again, Bob found companions of his own age.

It worked out well. Bob got a dose of "bossing" himself from a boy a little older and bigger and more dominating.

It isn't a good thing to let your child play with children whom he feels he can "boss." Equal competition both in the matter of skill and right of [illegible] for growth and a balanced sense of importance.

'DID IT RAIN?' -O- -O-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Love laughs at locksmiths." Ou aye! And it laughs at many other things besides—for instance, the weather. The great and terrifying weather, that casts such an important shadow over the doings of other folks who aren't lovers. Little kids turn freckled noses to the kind and grim heavens the day before the picnic is to come off—to see, "is it goin' to rain?" It means so much if Joey and Janie open their two pairs of eyes upon a gray window square on the day of days. Where, oh where is the beneficent sun, the sun-king? And where, or where is JOY if the sky spills over on the day of the picnic, and the sun-king hides his glorious face? It matters to kids, the weather does.

For the little steno, with her genius for turning lone and rare dollars into frocks with the chic of the French race track, the weather and Sunday are all tangled up together in her plans; so much so that if it rains on that precious day when she planned to do her horseback riding, or her swimming, or her hiking into the brilliant autumn woods, she had rather there were no Sunday at all! Unless she's in love; newly, beautifully, foolishly, headily in love, so that places, weather, doings, food, amusement mean nothing in her life, just so she bodily and soulfully, is with her beau.

The sea dog, with the model races coming off, HE cares about the weather. The mother with her extra little blue and tan shirts, panties and flowered school frocks, and the row of little vari-colored socks to get out on the line—they do use up so many clean clothes!—she welcomes the sun with crowing; she blows a kiss at his heated face! Father hates rainy days. Besides he has a camping trip planned, if all goes well in the finance department on the Roundout. And who can be as happy above the Blue-hole in sodden woods filled with the rustle and watery fall of gray rain, as a fellow can with the sun on the pool, the leaves crisp gold underfoot, and the shadows and the sun—violet and gold-staining every vista as he tramps joyfully along, the office forgotten?

But Love laughs at the weather, along with locksmiths, parents, tradition, opposition, misfortune.

Friday morning Jill looks up from her cereal with her blue eyes propped open. And she asks the family, "DID IT RAIN?" And the family fall back and put their hands to their brows. Did it rain!

Jill wants to know, with a new angora suit probably never the same, her knitted (home-knitted) cap shrunk to dime-size, her new, slim little ponyfoot shoes with what will probably be a permanent squeak, if it rained! She doesn't remember.

The weather is nothing to her just now. And it means as much to Jack. He hasn't even a slight sniffle to remember it by, though he stood at the gate a solid half-hour when all the angels were watering their gardens of Paradise at the same time, holding the hand of Jill. While she looked at him, and he looked at her, and Cupid got his permanent tested out.

Love is a wonderful thing. "DID it rain?" An old gentleman going by would have known it did—but not Jack and Jill. NELL BRINKLEY.

Suspicion of Philip Veritzen Is Revived

In almost any other circumstances I would have deplored the apparent cattiness of Mary's comment that she couldn't help being glad about the undeniable truth that any color becoming to Marion and Carolyn would not suit Avis Arlen. But this girl, whom she loathed for good reason, had been forced upon her as a bridesmaid. She was also certain that if Avis Arlen, by hook or crook, could prevent her wedding or make it uncomfortable, she would not hesitate to do so.

That Lillian shared my feelings I knew by the twinkle in her eyes, as she looked across at Mary.

"That helps some," she said. "Now, let's see. We've planned for Marion's gown to be that delicate shade of pink that you see in a half-opened rosebud. And Mr. Veritzen is sending over bushels—I'll wager on the amount—of those exquisite roses with tips of that color, while their base is that indescribable shade of light bronze."

She broke off and looked into space with her artist's eyes, which had planned so many beautiful effects.

"Those new changeable silks," she said. "If Helena can find the right shade that will bring out those colors, and with flower hats also shading in—my dear, Carolyn will be a dream, and the effect will be lovely! Avis will have so much war paint on that one color will look like another."

MARY ANGRY

"She'll probably fight like a Texas steer for pale green," Mary said apprehensively. "That's the color she always affects, because of that arsenical skin of hers. Oh, do forgive me, everybody!" she cried out remorsefully. "I know I'm being an awful little beast, but—but—I just can't help it, some way. Whenever I think of that—that—weasel spoiling my wedding, I just feel like tearing my hair."

Noel, for once, had a flash of inspiration. Paying no more attention to Lillian and me than if we were not in the room, he darted across to Mary and put his arms around her.

"Sweetheart," he said in low, tense tones, "you can't mean that—about anything spoiling our wedding. Nothing or nobody—not even my father—can spoil our wedding. That's just ours. Don't think of anything else."

She put her head against his shoulder, and for a long second clung to him.

"I'm going to be good from now on," she said, "even if Avis does wrangle Mrs. Brixton into letting her wear green."

"In the immortal language of your small brother, Roderick, 'Fat chance!'" Lillian told her, with fine scorn. "Little Avis will be as docile as if Mrs. Brixton were leading her by the hand. But I'll have to get busy with Helena. Are you sure you like that color scheme for the gowns, Mary?"

"It's just perfect," Mary reiterated.

'OLD LADIES'

"Then," Lillian said briskly, "suppose you leave the details to your Aunt Madge and me. Noel, take her outside to look at the moon for a minute or two, and then send her to bed. We old ladies will go into a sartorial conference."

"Old ladies" Mary scoffed, as Noel obediently drew her to the door. "You'll always be eighteen, both of you."

Left alone, Lillian and I dropped our masks as we looked at each other apprehensively.

"What do you suppose it means?" Lillian asked at last, "this ringing in by Phil of that girl who he must know, is so distasteful both to Noel and Mary?"

"Haven't I heard you say often," I said slowly, "that he has a sort of Quilpish humor? May he not be taking a bizarre sort of revenge for his altered wedding trip plans by bringing in this girl who he knows will make things uncomfortable for everybody?"

"I hope that's all it is," she said pessimistically, while I mentally echoed her wish. "But I don't mind telling you that I shall draw my first free breath for this month when I see those two children departing, safely tied together."

"I'm traveling right along with you," I told her with a wry smile. "But I don't suppose it will do us any good to worry over it."

"Right you are," she assented. "How lucky you have a branch telephone in this room. Stand by, will you, while I try to raise Helena by long distance?"

COLONIAL FIGURES
PATTERN 597

Embroider These Quaint Figures

How attractive these colonial figures would be if done on pillows, handkerchief or lingerie cases, lampshades or on other dainty articles! Besides being lovely when done, they are really fun to do. The embroidery is in such simple stitches as outline and lazy-daisy stitch and actual lace is gathered just a little and sewn on. The lines on which the lace is to be attached are shown on the pattern. The figure in the left hand corner is a novelty—a combination pincushion and case for powder-puffs. The top is a porcelain bust which can be gotten anywhere. Any of these motifs would make lovely Christmas gifts or accessories for the home.

Pattern 597 contains a transfer pattern of a motif 8x11 inches, [illegible] motifs 5½x7 inches, two motifs 5⅝ inches high, pattern pieces for the skirt of the pincushion doll and detailed directions for making it as well as suggestions for placing the motifs and yardages for a variety of articles.

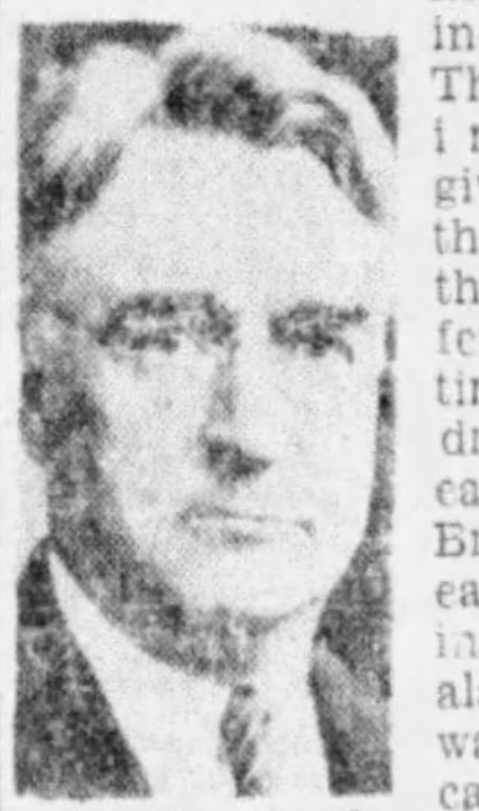
How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Albuminuria



Dr. Copeland

Anxiety and alarm are often created by the physician's report which states that "you have albumin in the urine." This statement immediately gives rise to the conviction that the sufferer is a victim of that dreaded disease known as Bright's disease. In many instances, the alarm is unwarranted and careful investigation soon reveals that the condition is one of mild and temporary nature.

Albuminuria, which is the condition in which albumin is found in the urine, can often be traced to some disturbance of the diet; overindulgence in exercise; change of climate or occupation. Of course, it is sometimes the first sign of an infection or irritation of the kidney. Persistent albuminuria is serious and means that some damage has occurred to the kidney.

Under normal conditions, albumin is not present. Occasionally it is found in the individual whose work requires continuous sitting or standing in one position. For this reason this type of albuminuria is spoken of as "orthostatis albuminuria." The albumin quickly disappears when the occupation is changed.

The condition is frequently encountered in young men and women who indulge in severe and prolonged athletics. It is also found in those persons who live on an exceptionally high protein diet and eat enormous and intemperate amounts of meat, fish and eggs. Albuminuria is also encountered in certain families showing a tendency towards this affliction. As a rule, it is most commonly found in thin, energetic individuals, rather than in obese persons.

In what I have said I do not mean to imply that albuminuria should be neglected. But its presence does not necessarily mean that you are a victim of Bright's disease. If repeated tests show the presence of albumin, it is advisable that you follow the diet and instructions given you by your physician. I would advise that you avoid strenuous exercise and lead a quiet and well regulated life.

In addition to diet and exercise, it is essential that the teeth, sinuses and tonsils be examined for possible points of infection.

Avoid cold baths, cold weather, and protect yourself against exposure to dampness. If you "catch cold," take the necessary measures for a prompt cure. Above all, it is essential that you report to your doctor. Periodic health examinations are important.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Photos as Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I have been going about with a young man for the past year. He has given me gifts on several occasions, and since he has several times asked me for a picture of myself, I should like to give him my photogrph for Christmas. Do you think this would be a suitable gift? If it is, would it be improper to give him a photograph that is quite large?

2—Most of all, I should be very thankful if you would tell me just how I should present this gift to him? Would it be proper to have the picture framed, ready for use, or is it best to present it in the photographer's folder and let the recipient do as he wishes with it. S.

1—Somehow I can never become very enthusiastic about the giving of a photograph for a Christmas present . . . especially when it is the gift of a girl to a man, or a man to a girl. It seems to take too much for granted. I'd very much prefer to have you give him your photograph now or after Christmas, and send him a Christmas card or some very simple gift for Christmas. Don't you really feel that this would be the better plan?

2—In any case, no matter when you send it, don't assume the privilege of having it framed. This certainly does take too much for granted.

A Bridesmaid's Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited by my best girl friend to be her bridesmaid next month. She has decided on having pink velvet for the bridesmaids and white for herself. As I have a very pretty yellow formal, with a jacket, that would look very well, also another complete formal outfit, I thought it would be too expensive to buy another dress of that type and naturally I refused the offer, saying I could not afford it.

What I would like to know is, was it terribly rude of me to turn it down? The expense would be approximately thirty dollars, as she wants all the dresses to be made. B.

I think that "terribly rude" might be a bit hard on yourself for what you felt you had to do but it is most unfortunate that you thought that you had to refuse this important and so-significant invitation from this dear friend of yours. Few invitations are so important as this, for it means that the bride has chosen you from among her world of friends, to be closely and preciously associated with her on her day of days. And we should be prepared to make any kind of sacrifice necessary.

It is taken for granted that the attendants of the bride-to-be will cooperate completely with her plans, and the most important of these plans is the buying of the wedding costumes. Naturally the bride-to-be could not give her consent to you wearing a dress that would be different from the ones worn by the other attendants.

Is it too late for you to reconsider this? I do hope that it isn't, and that you can budget your expenses in other things so that you can do this.

Helpful Hint To Arctic Voyagers

Before the Byrd South Pole Expedition left these shores, the cold climateers were asked what they would like most to hear on the broadcasts sent out to them from CBS at regular intervals.

The unanimous preference was for a dance orchestra to waft them the latest popular tunes.

If the Byrd boys are smart, they'll rig out a loudspeaker under the Jacob Ruppert's bowsprit, as a figurehead, pick up Cab Calloway's red hot rhythms, and blaze a way through the Bay of Whales ice fields.

Switchboard Secrets On Three Stations

Operator 13 by ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Gailliard Becomes Girl's Second Prisoner

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

He seemed dazed and shaken, but presently he sat down on his dead horse, closing both eyes. Then, after a moment, looked up at her in silence.

"Who told you I had come this way?" she demanded, cocking her pistol again.

"I reckon, ma'am, it was that fat Dutchman at the well house."

"Who else is following me?"

"Maybe Capt. Gailliard, ma'am. I reckon he'll try to find me."

The girl bade him remain motionless in a fierce little voice, and coming up behind him, searched him for weapons. And discovered he was entirely unarmed.

"No, ma'am," he said. "I don't carry weapons." But Operator 13 backed cautiously away from him, clutching in her left hand a bunch of papers she had discovered in his coat pocket.

"If Capt. Gailliard comes here, and if you call out to him," she said, "I'll have to kill you, and then kill him."

"I understand ma'am," he said softly.

She managed to keep one eye on him and one on the linen-backed map which she had discovered in his pocket and which she now unfolded. She could make nothing of it.

"Where is Jeb Stuart riding?" she demanded.

"Ma'am," he said mildly, "I regret so'ly that I must decline to answer questions."

"You won't talk?" she insisted.

"No, ma'am, I can't."

"You tried to catch me and have me hanged, didn't you?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, then, if you don't answer me I'll have to kill you!" cried the girl.

"Pray do, ma'am," he said quietly. "I reckon I'd like it better that away than I would like hanging."

She knew that she could not shoot him. But he didn't know it. Nobody could guess what such a devilish girl would do in a panic — a girl who had nearly killed Capt. Gailliard and had ridden off on his horse; who had faced rifle fire and had forded the river in the midst of 2,000 plunging Rebel horsemen; who had tricked Yellow Bob, stolen his horse and Jeb Stuart's two favorite mounts, and who now had shot him down and was flourishing a loaded pistol and threatening him.

An Offer

"Mr. Chancellor," she said, "I don't want to shoot you. But I don't wish to die, either. I'll go away if you'll tell me how to keep clear of the Rebel cavalry."

"No, ma'am, I won't tell you."

"Do you hope they will catch me and hang me?" she demanded angrily.

"I do, ma'am."

"Me, a woman?" she asked infuriated.

"I'm sorry, ma'am, but you are a death danger to my government, and you may yet ruin Gen. Stuart and a whole division of our best cavalry . . . I have no personal animosity against you, ma'am. You are young and fair to the eye"—he smiled faintly at her dark-stained skin—"and it's natural for any man to admire you—even when you are in Negro disguise. But with all that, ma'am, you surely ought to die because the safety of my government is in danger as long as you remain alive . . . Now, ma'am, you may shoot if it's got to be that way with you and me."

She knew it was not to be that way.

At the point of her pistol she made him get up, drove him a little way into the laurel and bade him stand there. Then she removed the bridle from his dead horse, and with this, pistol in hand and her long knife clutched between her teeth, she secured his elbows and wrists behind his back.

Now she forced him to precede her up through the rock-guarded portal to where the three horses were tied. Her saddle and bridle she transferred to Skylark; then she tried to get Chancellor onto Yellow Bob's horse. But with his hands fastened behind his back he couldn't mount the animal.

Confession

"If you'll give me your parole," she said breathlessly, "I'll trust you. Will you?"

"Why should I, ma'am? If you don't shoot me, Averell will hang me."

"You know I can't murder you!" she cried with a sob in her voice. "I can't get you onto a horse with your wrists tied up. I'm afraid to untie you. I'm afraid to kill you. I'm—I'm afraid of you, anyway. Will you let me alone if I let you alone?" she sobbed. "I'll give you Yellow Bob's horse if you'll go away! Will you?"

He looked hard at her: "Ma'am, are you truly afraid of me?"

"Yes, I am. I guess I'm a coward."

"Ma'am," he said, "you have more courage than any woman I ever knew. And most men . . . You may untie my hands, ma'am. I give you my parole."

She went to him instantly and unbuckled the bridle that confined his wrists and elbows. He lifted his big swollen hands and looked at them curiously. He was still stretching the aching fingers, when a horseman with a bandaged face trotted up, caught sight of him, called to him, scrambled out of his saddle and came running up to the road leading a stumbling horse.

And found himself with his nose almost touching a leveled pistol clutched in the steady fist of a ragged Negro lad.

"You drop that bridle and put up your hands; Captain Gailliard," cried Operator 13 excitedly, "or I'll shoot you all into little pieces this time!"

Capt. Jack Gailliard's reckless eyes gave her one astonished look; then became painfully cross-eyed as they concentrated on that black powder-ringed pistol muzzle close to his bandaged nose.

"Good God, Lucille," he gasped in an amazement almost comic, "don't do a thing like that to me!"

"Will you let me alone, then?" she asked tremulously.

"Let you alone? I should say I would. Please be careful with that horse pistol."

"Do—do you surrender?" she stammered fiercely.

There was a moment's silence. Gailliard's battered features reddened above the bandage and his swollen eyes sought Chancellor.

"What kind of dirty business is all this, Vespasian?" he demanded hoarsely.

Chancellor's eyes narrowed. "I reckon, suh, you don't aim to cast any reflection on me when you ask that question?"

"But—good God!"

"Yaas, suh, that's my onliest prayer, too; may God be good to us in this hour, Capt. Gailliard." Very slowly he extracted from his homespun pants pocket a section of Virginia twist, bit off a portion, savored it reflectively. "Yas, suh, Captain," he drawled. "I reckon we both belong to this young lady, now. Ef yuh jump she'll kill yuh. Ef yuh speak softly yuh can step out o' this world o' trouble, ca'm an' polite, in a sunset square o' Yankee cavalry. All depends on how yuh want things fixed, suh."

Read This First

Gail Loveless, at 20, became a spy in the Federal service and was designated as Operator 13. In the disguise of a quadroon laundress, she was sent to the headquarters of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, Confederate cavalry leader, who was planning a daring raid into Pennsylvania.

Capt. Gailliard, leader of Stuart's spies, flirted with her, kissed her, fell half in love with her and was ashamed of himself. He and Belle Boyd, most famous Confederate woman spy, were convinced that "Lucille Lyndon," as she called herself, was a genuine colored girl, and harmless. But Vespasian Chancellor, Gailliard's colleague, suspected her. Eventually he exposed her as a spy. She stole Gailliard's horse, struck him in the face with his own pistol and fled.

Barred from flight in any other direction, she boldly joined Stuart's cavalry as it started north on its Pennsylvania raid. She cajoled Yellow Bob, Stuart's groom, into letting her ride one of the General's horses. She stole a farm boy's clothes to improve her disguise. Chancellor's "instinct" led him to a stable where Operator 13 had hidden in a hayloft. Gailliard, with Chancellor, persuaded the latter to go away.

Operator 13 taking Gen. Stuart's horses, rode away. When Chancellor pursued she shot his horse from ambush. The man is at her mercy. . . .

Now Go On With the Story

Pledge of Honor

An intense silence. The pistol muzzle always steady, Gailliard's fascinated eyes on it; then on the girl who owned it.

Then the boy sighed: "Very well, ma'am; you may have my word of honor."

"I want your parole, also," she insisted.

He looked miserably at Chancellor, who shrugged. "I gave the young lady my parole," he said pleasantly.

"All right," exclaimed the boy. "I give you my parole of honor, then!" His voice was harsh with choked anger; he flung his bridle from him, rudely pushed past her in the rocky pass and strode up to the chief of spies. "Damn it!" he said. "Do you understand that this means a double hanging?"

"I do, suh."

The boy flushed under Chancellor's intent gaze and, turning away, covered his face with both quivering hands.

"I reckon," said Chancellor softly, "we both aim to face it ca'mly, suh?"

Gailliard's hands fell to his sides; he turned slowly to the chief of spies. A moment they gazed at each other, then the boy's eyes flashed with tears and his hands sought Chancellor's arm.

"I don't know how she got you," he said, "but I don't doubt you."

"Yuh needn't, suh. She ambushed me an' shot down mah hoss. An' thar I lay on mah back in the brook like an ole tarry-pinturkle, suh, one laig pinned under daid hoss, an' a roarin' noise in mah ears like the beat o' the sunset shadow-dance."

The boy made an involuntary movement at the repulsive suggestion; he had grown very pale. "Do you think there is any chance?" he asked. "The cavalry are at Cashtown."

"Gawd, no," said Chancellor quietly. "They go South to Emmettsburg, suh. What would fetch them up heah into these Pennsylvania mountains?"

Operator 13, who had been watching them, pistol in hand, spoke now: "Gentlemen, I have two prisoners on parole and four captured horses to care for. And I should be on my way."

They looked at her in silence.

"Mr. Gailliard," she went on, I see you have recovered your own horse. You will mount him, if you please, and lead Lady Margrave." She turned to Vespasian Chancellor. "Be kind enough to take the saddle from your dead horse, sir, and place it on this nag of Yellow Bob's. Here is your bridle."

Unreasoning Fear

Gailliard's face had become a sullen, ugly red again as he walked over to his horse, mounted, groped for the sagging halter. He did not look at the girl again, but her dark eyes reverted to him now and then, while Chancellor stripped his dead horse of its trappings and came striding up to saddle Yellow Bob's rangy hunter. When all was ready he stood to horse, awaiting further orders.

"Mount," said Operator 13 briefly; and was lithely in Skylark's saddle before the word left her lips. She gathered curb and snaffle and put Skylark into motion.

Suddenly an unreasoning shaft of purest fear struck through her like an arrow. Pistol in hand, she turned in a panic, her dark fringed eyes fairly glittering with terror and excitement.

"Gentlemen," she stammered, I—I am s-scared to death! Be good enough to set your p-pace by mine!"

Vespasian Chancellor had ridden many a breakneck race with death. So had Capt. Jack Gailliard. Never before had they ridden so terrific a course, hurling their horses blindly over an unknown lumber road in the drizzle and obscurity of a dark, October afternoon.

Suddenly through the woods a red shaft of sunlight slanted across the trail—the most ghastly omen of it all for these two men who were riding headlong to their deaths. As though their distant Yankee executioner, with his cork-blackened hands and face, were already waiting impatiently in the red sunset light, where two noosed ropes dangling under the long crossbar cast sinister patterns across the withered grass.

They galloped out into a brushy clearing overlooking a flat valley of farm lands below, and the girl flung up one hand in signal to draw bridle.

It was very hot and moist and still in the clearing. At the eastern edge near a spring stood a leanto, evidently just erected and still fresh and fragrant with spruce, hemlock and balsam thatching. Nobody was there; the clearing was still as death, ringed by forested depths where wet leaves glistened crimson and gold and purple in the sun.

Operator 13 listened intently, searching the thickets with restless gaze. Nothing stirred there save a somber butterfly sailing on dark, ermine bordered wings. Not a sound except the tinkle of a rill.

Again and again her weary gaze sought the little valley close below the knoll where they had halted. There were plowed fields there, and reaped fields and pastures, and this wood road ran into them; but no fences, no sheep, no cattle; nothing of human handiwork excepting a planked platform with uprights, and a framed beam above them, which seemed to be a structure designed to support a winter haystack.

The girl looked wistfully at the open country, but had no mind to venture into it until dark. She was very tired and hungry but no longer frightened.

Stiffly she freed one bare foot from the stirrup, dismounted, unbuckled Yellow Bob's saddle-bag and groped in it for food. She found a bottle of peach brandy, a loaf of bread, a large cold sausage, three onions and a chunk of salt beef. These she carried to the open-faced shed. Then she came back.

Weary

"Gentlemen," she said, "let us care for our horses, and then eat and rest."

"Are we to off-saddle, ma'am?" asked Chancellor in his pleasant voice.

She looked at him with a pale smile and nodded.

Jack Gailliard also got off his horse; and he and Chancellor and Operator 13 gathered dead grass with which to rub down the weary horses. There was enough browsing in the bushes; Chancellor cut stakes; the girl drove them with her pistol butt; and, with halter, bridle and picket rope, the four nags were tethered amid wild grasses and weeds along the tiny rivulet.

The girl glanced furtively from time to time at Capt. Gailliard's sullen young face; but it was to Vespasian Chancellor she addressed herself, finally, inviting them both to share her food.

"I thank you kindly, ma'am," said Chancellor, with a bow as courtly as any obeisance south of the Dixie line. But Gailliard gave her a sulky look and continued to pull grass for his horse.

"Will you please eat with us, Capt. Gailliard?" she said firmly, the inflection of her voice making the question a command.

"Very well," he growled.

They sat down on the carpet of balsam in front of the shack. Operator 13 carved bread and beef, and sliced the sausage and onions with her long knife. There was only one tin cup among them for water and peach brandy.

Operator 13 sat in such a position that she could see the valley below and also watch the road over which they had arrived, which ran straight away to the westward for nearly a quarter of a mile. Her loaded pistol lay beside her on the ground.

NEBRASKA'S STARTING LINEUP FOR BATTLE WITH PITT'S PANTHERS AT STADIUM THIS AFTERNOON . . . THEY'RE LONG-TIME RIVALS AND A TOUGH GAME LOOMS

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Pirate Deal Looks Helpful. Piet Only Asset Leaving. Panthers Given High Rank.
◆

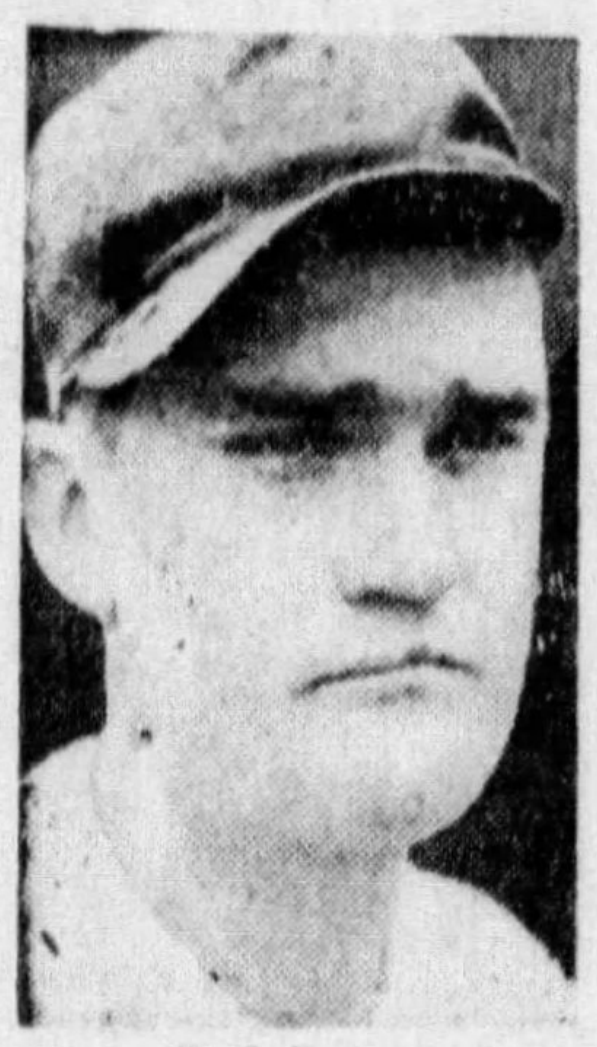
LUCAS APPEARS WORTH THIS STIFF PRICE

When the playing value of Tony Piet is considered, the Pittsburgh baseball club would appear to have paid a stiff price for Red Lucas and Wally Roettger in giving up such a good hitter and baserunner as the Pirate second baseman, in addition to Adam Comorosky. The last named was deadwood here and has outlived his local usefulness. Roettger, obtained only to protect the Bucs with an extra outfielder who hits righthanded, alternating in reserve duty with Forrest Jensen, is by no means a front-rank player, but may be as serviceable as Comorosky, though much slower, and can hardly fail to pay more attention to business. That narrows the deal down to a trade of Piet for Lucas, and though, as already remarked, the price is a stiff one, when you consider how urgently the Bucs needed another first-class pitcher, such a flinger as Lucas would have been cheap at almost any cost.



Red Lucas

Si Johnson would have been more acceptable, on account of being a younger hurler who will last longer, but you can't get any particular player when the other club won't give him up, and in obtaining Lucas, President Benswanger and Manager Gibson appear to have made the best move possible under the circumstances. To be a pennant contender, the local club just had to get another capable starting pitcher, and you can't get a good pitcher without giving up something of value in exchange for him.

It would be hard to find the equal of Red, who is a fine hitter besides, among all the hurlers with whom other clubs in the league are willing to part. He ought to take a new lease of life here, after a slight falling-off with a tailend team for which no pitcher could win, and in that event he will be one of the most valuable slabmen in the big show. There isn't a club in the majors that wouldn't be glad to have Lucas on its roster, and, everything considered, the Pirates' go-getting president and manager appear to have swung a good trade that will help the Pirates.

Filling the second-base hole may look like a problem, but the Bucs got along very well without Piet for many weeks last season, and there is a reasonable prospect that a satisfactory guardian of the keystone sack will be found in Thevenow, Lavagette, or Young, or possibly a new man to come later. The main thing to be considered is that the Bucs needed another first-class starting pitcher vitally, and they've got him.

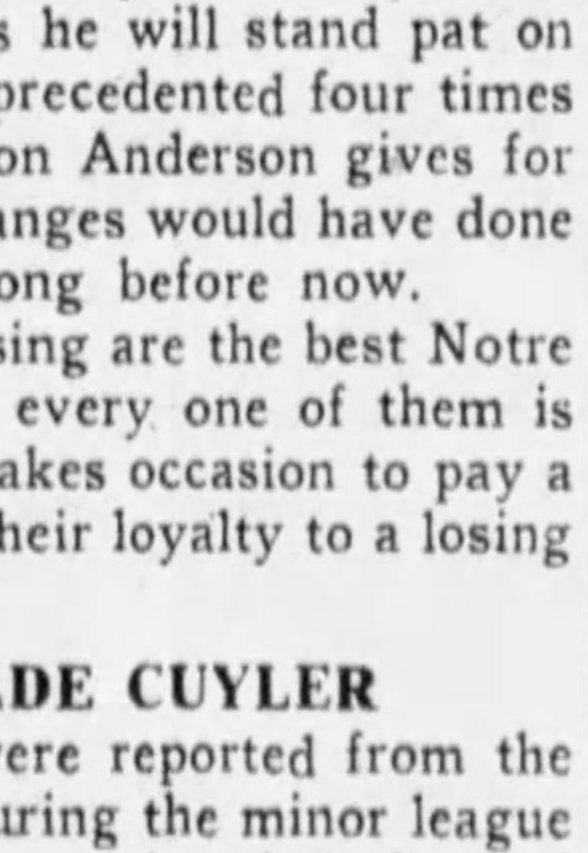
LITTLE RATES PITT EQUAL TO EAST'S BEST

Though admitting that Army, if it defeats Navy and Notre Dame after today's let-down game against Pennsylvania Military, in the same decisive manner in which it won its earlier engagements, will be conceded the ranking of the leading team of the year in the eastern football sector, Lou Little personally holds Pitt to be equal to Army or any other contender for top honors in the East.

The Columbia coach says that while it was unfortunate Pitt lost to Minnesota, there is hardly a doubt in his mind the Panthers are equally as strong as Army. Pointing out that the Sutherlands have played a harder schedule than the Cadets, Little remarked, in sizing up the situation prior to today's games, that "if the Panthers are able to win over Nebraska and Carnegie Tech, it is going to be some job fairly to decide which team, Pitt or Army, is Number One."

CORBUS AND ROSENBERG IN GUARD RACE

Out on the Pacific Coast, Bill Corbus, of Stanford, and Aaron Rosenberg, of Southern California, are having a hot race as accepted candidates for an all-America rating at guard. Corbus, who won a berth on the mythical eleven last year, not only plays a great game in the line, but his placement kicking beat U. C. L. A. and the Trojans this fall. He outplayed Rosenberg when they met last Saturday, but Rosenberg is considered still very much in the running.



Bill Corbus

This is another case showing how unfairly all-America rankings may work out. California critics express the opinion that either Corbus or Rosenberg will be disappointed, as "both guard positions cannot be awarded to the coast." If any two guards, or tackles, or ends, or halfbacks are admittedly the best in the game, why should they not be given the all-America positions, even if they play on the same team, much less in the same sector? Evidently all-America picking goes along the line of the old political racket of scattering favors.

ANDERSON STANDS PAT ON LOSING LINEUP

Less stolid minds might become panicky under the circumstances, but Hunk Anderson today calmly makes it known that for Notre Dame's remaining games he will stand pat on the lineup that has been defeated an unprecedented four times in a row. And you can't beat the reason Anderson gives for his stand-pat policy. He says that if changes would have done any good he would have made them long before now.

Hunk declares that the men he is using are the best Notre Dame has for every position, and that every one of them is giving his best efforts. Anderson also takes occasion to pay a tribute to the Notre Dame students for their loyalty to a losing team.

CUB BOSSES PLANNING TO TRADE CUYLER

While no steps in that direction were reported from the conferences of major league men held during the minor league convention in Galveston, which ended yesterday, it is learned from reliable sources that the Chicago National League club plans to trade Outfielder Kiki Cuyler if a satisfactory swap that will send him to another team in the senior circuit can be arranged. Cuyler is said to be one of the Cubs slated to go during the winter, along with Babe Herman, Pat Malone, Jim Mosolf and others.

Kiki Cuyler

Around the big loops, Kiki still is looked on as one of the best outfielders and all-around players in the game, but he is understood to have lost favor with the Bruin bosses because of a reported inclination to play only when it suited his fancy after he rejoined the club last summer following a long absence due to the breaking of one of his legs in spring training. According to rumor, everything was set for the transfer of the former Pirate to another National League club several weeks ago, but the deal fell through at the last minute. The Cub leaders now are trying to make new arrangements, it is said, and if Cuyler is not traded before the 1934 season arrives it will be only because the Chicago club finds it impossible to get his estimated worth in exchange.

ICE MARATHON UNDER WAY TONIGHT

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Pittsburgh's first ice skating marathon gets under way with a smash in Duquesne Garden tonight.

Teams of star racers from all over the country and Canada will vie with local pairs in a seven-day grind, the first ever attempted. There have been six-day races in other cities, but this is the first time the contestants will be asked to keep up the grueling competition for a full week.

Bobby McLean

The gun sending the teams away will bark shortly before midnight, immediately after the night skating session ends. A half hour radio broadcast over WWSW will mark the start and the fans will be kept posted with daily broadcasts.

SKATE CONTINUOUSLY

Bobby McLean, for 10 years world champion professional speed skater, is manager of the race and received entries up to noon today. Joe E. Brown, the screen comedian, will serve as starter.

Under the rules of the meet, the teams will be on the ice continuously, with the members of teams alternating for three-hour hitches. If any of the skaters drop out their partners will have to carry on alone until they can get new partners from the field in the race.

Sprints will be staged several times daily for which the leaders will be credited with points on a basis of 40 for first place, 30 for second, 20 for third and 10 for fourth. These points will determine the leaders in the event of ties in the matter of laps covered up to the final hour, when the leaders will sprint throughout the last 60 minutes for the prizes.

It is estimated the racers will cover more than 200 miles a day.

ALONG BIKE RACE LINES

The regular skating sessions will continue while the race is in progress, the contestants rimming the ice surface on their special track. Fancy skating and comedy stunts will be added attractions.

The race is patterned along the lines of the six-day bicycle races, and spectators will be on hand all hours of the day and night including Sunday. No tickets will be sold tomorrow, but persons in attendance tonight will receive free Sunday admissions.

Real Threat Faced By Purdue Eleven

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 18.—(INS.)—Promise of fair weather and a spectacular open scoring battle between two of the best offensive teams in the Western Conference were expected to lure a near capacity crowd to Ross-Ade Stadium this afternoon to see Purdue's undefeated football team battle Iowa's Hawkeyes.

Both the Hawkeyes and Boilermakers are known as attacking elevens and will rely on a dry, fast field. Purdue can look back on a string of 46 consecutive games in which one or more touchdowns have been scored, while the Hawkeyes have scored one or more touchdowns in every game this season.

Dixie League Bans Intentional Pass

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 18.—(AP.)—The Southern Association startled the baseball world yesterday with adoption of an amazing rule designed to curb intentional passes with two men out by permitting the base runners to advance.

The rule provides that:

"In any inning of next year's Southern Association games, after two outs have been made, if the pitcher delivers four consecutive balls to the batter, the batter shall be entitled to first base, and any and all base runners occupying bases shall be advanced two bases, except in the event both second base and third base are occupied, the runner on third base shall score and the runner on second shall advance to third."

The rule also would apply to unintentional passes.

Numerous delegates expressed doubt, however, that the national rules committee would permit such a drastic change.

'Sold Down River' No Funeral Dirge To Comorosky

WILKES-BARRE, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—There's no wailing or weeping by Adam Comorosky over being traded to the Cincinnati Reds by Pittsburgh Pirates. Informed of the deal, after he returned from a hunting trip, the outfielder said last night:

"Boy! That suits me fine. I could always hit better there than anywhere in the league and the fans treated me swell. I hope Donie Bush and Jewel Ens stay there. I broke in under Donie and Ens was like a father to me at Pittsburgh. I'm tickled to death."

JADICK BEATS NEBO

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Johnny Jadick, of Philadelphia, one-time Pennsylvania-recognized junior-welterweight titleholder, won a 10-round decision over Pete Nebo, of Key West, Fla.

Touchdown Hinges On Toss of Coin

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Nov. 18.—(AP.)—The flip of a coin decided the score of a football game here yesterday between East Fairmont and Morgantown high schools. Morgantown won, 6-0.

In the closing minutes of the game, with no score on either side, East Fairmont elected to punt from near its own goal. The kick was blocked and recovered in the end zone. But the referee, Ben Kahn, could not decide who had recovered the ball. The pigskin apparently was caught at the same time by two rival players, both of whom had firm grips on the ball when time was called.

If Kahn ruled that it was Fairmont's ball the result would be a safety and a 2-0 score; if Morgantown was awarded the ball, a touchdown would go with it. So Ben flipped a coin to decide the issue.

CLOSE, BITTER FRAY LIKELY AT STADIUM

Navy came here, with hopes of taking down the Eastern championship in mind, but was soundly trounced. Last week, Duquesne put an eight-game victory string to the test and was found wanting.

Nebraska's boasts of power and strength are not unfounded. In the first place, the Huskers have a well laid attack, perfected by the heady Dana X. Bible, head coach at Nebraska since 1929. Secondly, they have experience, and will start no fewer than nine seniors against the Panthers. Thirdly, they have a wealth of brilliant individual performers, headed by George Sauer, the middle West's candidate for all-America fullback honors, and ably backed up by such luminaries as quarterback Bernie Masterson; end, Bruce Kilbourne, and guards, DeBus and Bishop.

And fourth, and probably the most important, 15 members of this year's squad were along in 1931 when the Huskers suffered one of the most disastrous defeats in the school's gridiron history, that 40-0 walloping in the Stadium.

They won't forget that, those Huskers.

There is, however, one point the Huskers must not overlook. Pitt has lost only two November games in nine years, one to Ohio State and one to Wash-Jeff. Tough as the Panthers are at all times, they are doubly, yea, triply, so in November.

SAUER BIG STAR

Nebraska's chief offensive threats are to be found in the six-foot, three-inch Bernie Masterson, at quarterback, and Sauer at full. Sauer, weighing 195 pounds, actual weight, is fast, a fine passer, hard line slasher and alert and heady on the defense. He's good, and Pitt knows it, for didn't he gain 152 yards against 'em in the scoreless tie at Lincoln last year? He did.

Masterson rates second to Sauer as a ground gainer, but he's not far behind, certainly not far enough to ease the minds of the Panthers.

The Nebraska attack is an open one, with a pip of a repertoire of passes. The Huskers employ the lateral pass with proficiency, too.

Against this outlay of strength, Pitt will throw its powerful line, probably the strongest in the East; a fullback who'll give Sauer all he wants in the way of a ground gaining duel in Izzy Weinstock, a hard-hitting, aggressive halfback in Howdy O'Dell and, if possible, the tricky stepping, speedy Mike Sebastian. Mike is suffering froom a badly bruised side, suffered in the Duquesne game last week, but he's fit to go if necessary.

And it looks like said necessity might arise.

PITT LINE TOUGH

Good as the Huskers undoubtedly are, they'll have trouble running against the Pitt line, against which no team has campaigned with any great success this fall. Muggsy Skladany and Tiger Walton, Doc Hartwig, Si

PEABODY HIGH CROWNED CITY GRID CHAMP

Weinstock Gains Rating on Play Against Dukes

By CHRISTY WALSH,
Member, All-America Board of Football
(Reg. U. S. Pat. Office)

The seventh week's ratings for 1933 bring the number of players designated by the All-America Board to a total of 64—with nine names going on the list for the first time this week.

All America Ratings

Some of these names will appear in the official All-America team selected at the end of the season, but more of them will be found in the annual All-Star line-up which the All-America Board will select for the East, South, Pacific Coast and Middle West, respectively. The following players will receive Cards of Merit for what they did on the football field last Saturday afternoon:

Grid Contest

Do you make a hobby of picking all-America football teams? If so, you may win an all-America football blanket in the contest to be conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in connection with these weekly ratings.

Read tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph for details.

1—MICHELET, Dartmouth. This fast-charging guard, assisted by alert Dartmouth linemen, was the answer to Princeton's close call and inability to do much scoring. Michelet made 75 per cent of the loser's tackles.

2—EVERHARDUS, Michigan. Punching the line and playing a grand defensive game, Everhardus topped off a great afternoon with a 47-yard run on a frozen, sloppy field, and his educated toe added the four points needed to beat Iowa.

3—KRUEGER, Marquette. A fine center, inspiring leader and a vital factor in the victory over Creighton. His passing was faultless, and he performed all of his assignments well. (Ronald McIntyre, Milwaukee Sentinel.)

4—CORBUS, Stanford. This amazing guard was the greatest player on the field in a game that snapped the long winning streak of Southern California. Stanford won through the charging of its line and Corbus led in every charge. He played 60 minutes, led powerful interference, captained the team, kicked off and personally won the game in the closing minutes with two field goals. (Sid Ziff, Los Angeles Herald, and Harry Borba, San Francisco News.)

5—MEIULAK, University of Oregon. This fullback dominated the game by his defensive play, his interference and as a decoy on reverses. He pounded 89 yards in one drive and scored the first touchdown after leading another drive for 71 yards. (L. H. Gregory, Portland Oregonian.)

6—WEINSTOCK, University of Pittsburgh. In rain and mud, this great fullback was the principal factor in Duquesne's first defeat of the season. He carried the ball for a four-yard average on 14 attempts, scored the only touchdown and kicked the extra point. (Harry Keck, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.)

7—SAUER, University of Nebraska. Another great fullback. His running, kicking and passing were extraordinary and his work on defense and offense was the main factor in keeping Nebraska undefeated. (Ed Cochrane, Kansas City Journal Post.)

8—ROBERTS, Tulane. His defensive work demoralized the Mississippi State attack and his 75-yard run to a touchdown was the turning point in a one-sided victory for Tulane. (Fred Digby, New Orleans Item.)

9—SMITH, New York University. His great passing and all-round backfield play bewildered a strong Fordham team until the final moments of the game. With the exception of one player, Danowski, Smith was the outstanding player of the game.

10—SLOCUM, Georgia Tech. Here is a truly great end who has received no public credit. He blocked Florida tackles out of nearly every play. He caught one very difficult pass in a pinch and did not permit a single gain around his end. (W. A. Alexander, member All-America Board of Football.)

Fuller Presses Ross In Titular Bout

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Barney Ross still held title to the junior-welterweight championship of the world today, but his grip on the synthetic honor was not as firm as it might have been.

Making his first appearance before a home crowd since he took the world lightweight and junior-welter titles away from Tony Canzoneri last June, the youngster from Chicago's West Side worked out a close decision over rugged Sammy Fuller, of Boston, in a 10-round battle at the Chicago Stadium last night.

The less important of the titles was at stake, and Fuller came close enough to split the decision of the referee and judges.

Peabody High School, one of the oldest schools in Pittsburgh, today was celebrating the winning of its first City League football championship as a result of its 13-0 victory over South Hills High School in a post-season contest played before almost 3,000 fans at Forbes Field yesterday afternoon.

Taking advantage of every break of the game, Peabody, champion of Section I for the first time since the league was organized into two divisions in 1924, swept aside a heavier and more rugged opponent from the South Hills to ascend the throne vacated by Perry, 1932 champion.

UPSET OF DOPE

Peabody, rated the under-dog prior to the game, took the play away from the Tunnelites at the outset and as a result the major part of the contest was staged in South Hills' territory.

The victory of the East Enders enabled Section I to regain the City crown after two years of disappointment. Back in 1931 South Hills won the championship by defeating Schenley in the Pitt Stadium, while last season Perry upset the dope by vanquishing Westinghouse at Peabody High School field.

After playing on even terms in the first quarter, Peabody started to go places in the second period. It was mid-way in this quarter that Kenneth Forbeck, quarterback of the Peabody eleven, received a South Hills punt on his own 40-yard line, and behind perfect interference, raced the remaining 60 yards to provide the first thrill of the game.

The second touchdown did not come until the fourth quarter, when Abner Roberts, all-scholastic halfback, broke off left tackle to run 43 yards for a touchdown. He followed this run by tossing a pass to Latterman for the thirteenth point.

ATTACK STOPPED

The much-heralded running attack of South Hills was smothered by an aggressive Peabody line from start to finish, runner after runner being smeared before they could get started. While South Hills' backs were being checked, Forbeck, Roberts and Robinson were making short, but consistent gains against the South Hills' line. Peabody failed to make a first down in the first half, but the East Enders got away for two long runs, both of which resulted in scores.

In the matter of first downs, South Hills made four to two for Peabody, yet South Hills seldom, if ever, was in a scoring position.

Standing out for Peabody in its well-deserved victory were Robert Robinson, Phil Latterman, Sal Sunseri, Abner Roberts and Kenneth Forbeck. Forbeck's speed in returning punts played a major part in the triumph.

South Hills failed to display the same form that characterized its fine showing during the regular season. Its blocking was ragged and its line functioned poorly.

George Fowle, who suffered two broken fingers in the contest, Melvin MacDonald, Milan Blazak and Fred Schindler were the South Hills' stars.

As a result of its victory, Peabody will receive the Fintex trophy, emblematic of the City League championship.

LEADERS TO PLAY

Four class AA football games head the scholastic card in Western Pennsylvania, two of them involving contenders for the championship.

Greensburg goes after its fifth double A victory by engaging Wilkinsburg at Wilkinsburg, while Jeannette seeks its fourth class AA triumph by opposing Washington at Jeannette.

In the other class AA games, Turtle Creek Union plays at Norwin and New Kensington at Clairton.

The remainder of the W. P. I. A. L. card is a light one.

Main Bout Booked For Wrestling Show

Vanka Zelezniak, bearded Russian wrestler, and Gino Garibaldi, Italian have been signed for the main bout of the opening wrestling show at Motor Square Garden next Thursday night. They will grapple one fall to a finish.

The semi-final will be limited to 45 minutes and the two preliminaries to 30 minutes each.

WOMAN ROLLS 658

An unusual total of 658 for three games was rolled in duckpins by Miss Alberta Garbett, of Mt. Washington, on the Elba alleys, downtown. She scored 189, 248 and 189.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 18.—With a fighting Georgetown University football team primed to save something out of the wreckage of a mediocre season, and a tired Carnegie Tech squad hoping to get by using a second-string lineup, Tartans and Hoyas will clash at Clark Griffith Stadium here today.

There will be no repetition of last year's 51 to 0 rout. This year's Georgetown aggregation is a far better defensive team than the one that failed completely to bottle George Kavel up a year ago, and Coach Howard Harpster's plan is avowedly to get by in any manner possible, without wasting any of his varsity strength, with the New York and Pittsburgh games just around the corner.

Burns, at left end; Anderson, at left guard; Nutter, at right tackle; Bowser, at left halfback, and Brewer, at right halfback, will start their first games for Carnegie today. However, there will be a sprinkling of experienced men all through the lineup to bolster the Tartan battle front. The tackles, Carl Forsman and Lee Nutter, have both seen plenty of service, as has Henry Dresher, at right guard, and Jerry O'Tooole, at center. Charley Spisak, quarterback, made his debut against Michigan State a week ago, and did a good job, and Johnny Sayles is a veteran.

If the Skibo second team can get any kind of a lead, Coach Harpster plans to let these boys play throughout the game. Otherwise, he will have to rush his veterans into action.

OREGON FIGHTS SOUTHERN CAL.

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 18.—Fit as a fiddle and ready for play, the crack Oregon University football machine squared off today for a healthy sock at the University of Southern California.

More than 50,000 fans were expected to witness the game today in which Oregon has its sights leveled at a jeweled diadem marked "Rose Bowl, coast title, national recognition."

Victory would give Oregon the undisputed football title of the Pacific Coast, the right to represent the Coast in the annual Pasadena New Year's game, and a western claim for national honors.

Should the University of Southern California, smarting under the suprise loss to Stanford, come back and defeat Oregon, then the Coast race again would be in a muddle, with the three schools listed in this paragraph all having a chance at the invitation to represent the West in the Rose Bowl.

Stanford and California were taking it comparatively easy today with Stanford playing Montana and California playing Idaho. The California schools play their annual "big game" next Saturday.

Wisconsin Tilts With Ohio State

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 18.—(INS.)—The underdog Wisconsin football team this afternoon will attempt the almost impossible task of unseating Ohio State in a Western Conference game here.

Ohio State holds a wide edge in weight, reserve material, speed and experience against the almost green squad of the Badgers.

AMATEURS HERE FOR CONCLAVE

Drastic reorganization changes in the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States may be ordered during the National convention of the body, which opens here tomorrow. Indications today were to the effect that the special reorganization committee would recommend radical departures, and in case this comes to pass, they will be placed on the floor of the convention for approval.

One of the suggested new provisions would invest cities and towns with authority to run off their own separate events with the full approval of the National organization. For example, if the city of Erie wished to stage an A. A. U. meet, the local officials, under the new idea, could proceed without first getting the approval of the Allegheny Mountain Association, of which the city is a part.

The special reorganization committee which has this important matter under advisement is made up of 10 of the most prominent A. A. U. officials in the United States, their names representing practically every big athletic section of the country.

Headed by Avery Brundage, president of the A. A. U., the other members are as follows: G. T. Kirby, New York; Frank Facey, Boston; D. J. Ferris, New York; Charles L. Ornstein, Washington; L. di Benedetto, New Orleans; William S. Haddock, Pittsburgh; Seth Van Patten, Los Angeles; Fred Steers, Chicago, and P. J. Walsh, New York.

The three-day convention of the National organization is expected to hum with action. The delegates began to arrive today, and by tomorrow all will have reached the city, it was expected. Mayor Herron will deliver the address of welcome Monday at 9 a. m.

D. & E. CARDS SALEM

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 18.—(AP.)—The Davis and Elkins College football team will play Salem College November 2, 1934, on a local high school field, it was announced here today.

PITT BATTLES 'HUSKERS

Meredith and Tar Onder will have plenty to say about how and when and where Mister Sauer and his mates ramble today.

Coach Sutherland has elected to start Bob Timmons, of the North Side, at left end today in the place of Harvey Rooker. The remainder of the Pitt regular caste will be in there for the kickoff. Sutherland will not decide until game time on his quarterback, but has both Munjas and Hogan available. Hogan may start and also captain the team.

COACHES CONFIDENT

Here is what Coach Bible had to say concerning the game:

"We are going to have a great ball game. It will be different than it was two years ago; different even than last year, when I think we deserved to win. There'll be plenty of thrills, we'll guarantee that, and plenty of squirming on the bench. I think we can win, and I say that with due regard for Dr. Sutherland's fine team and for the known strength of Pitt. But, we've been playing fine football and see no reason why we should not continue against Pitt."

Coach Sutherland has been attempting all week to impress on his men that it will be no pink tea they'll be attending this afternoon, thinks his eleven is ready. He said:

"The team is in good shape and we'll give Nebraska a football game. If the boys play the football of which they are capable, of which they know, we should win, but it will be a tough fight."

This morning, in the Tartan Bowl, the Pitt and Tech freshmen elevens are staging their annual clash. The Pitt B eleven, in charge of Assistant Coach Eddie Shultz, meets the West Virginia B team at Morgantown this afternoon in a preliminary tussle to the West Virginia-West Virginia Wesleyan contest.

GAME PASSED UP

W. Don Harrison, Pitt's athletic director, stated yesterday that Pitt was not interested in a probable invitation from Chicago relative to a post-season game at Soldiers' Field of that city. It is proposed to stage a match in Chicago between the two outstanding elevens of the country, December 9.

Heading the other games in the district is the battle for the Tri-State Conference between Geneva College and Grove City at Beaver Falls. Other district games find Wash-Jeff at Temple, Pitt B at West Virginia B, Davis & Elkins at Albright, Clarion at Slippery Rock, Shippensburg at Indiana, LaSalle at St. Vincent, Thiel at Waynesburg and Case at Westminster.

At Morgantown, West Virginia and West Virginia Wesleyan renew their annual state feud.

LONDOS MAT VICTOR

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Jim Londos, of Greece, Pennsylvania-recognized world's heavyweight wrestling champion, marked his return to American shores with a one-fall victory over George Zaharias, of Pueblo, Col., in the windup bout of a wrestling show last night.

O'Doul, Shooting At Quail, Hits Hunting Pal

STOCKTON, Cal., Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Frank (Lefty) O'Doul, New York Giants outfielder, pulled the trigger on a covey of quail. He had just jumped in the brush and said, "get a load of this."

Hap Collard, friend and hunting companion of O'Doul, "got the load," but not the kind Lefty meant. They picked 35 bird shot out of Collard's face, ears, arms and chest.

The injuries were only superficial. Collard, former major league and Coast league pitcher was partly obscured by heavy brush when O'Doul fired.

GRID INJURY FATAL

MEMPHIS, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Harry Tipton, of Memphis, Southwestern freshman halfback, died at a hospital yesterday following an injury to his left arm in a game between the freshmen and the Central High School team here two weeks ago. A boil on his arm was broken during the game. The arm became infected. Death was attributed to blood poisoning.

FANS DIVIDED ON BUC SWAP

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Great as it is, the Pitt-Nebraska grid classic at the Stadium did not keep the feverish baseball fan from talking out of turn today. The unseasonable chatter was inspired by the big swap negotiated by the Pirates and Cincinnati Reds yesterday when Secondbaseman Tony Piet and Outfielder Adam Comorosky left the Buccaneer roster to make room for Pitcher Charles (Red) Lucas and Outfielder Walter Roettger, of the Reds.

The loud speculation on the big deal was quick to take on a controversial twist. Not a few supporters of the home team were convinced that the clever Lucas would serve as the balance of power in bringing a pennant to Forbes Field next year. Others were just as sure that the Pittsburgh team would feel the loss of the two Polish flyers, who were potent forces in the unmatched running and hitting attack of the runnerup Buccos. Moreover, these left-wing customers were a bit dubious as to whether the Cincinnati sorreltop is as good as he was five years ago.

Lucas will be aged 32 next April. Red is of the ilk that takes fine care of itself, but when one has pitched steadily for 10 years he generally finds himself past the peak.

The veteran pitcher's countless boosters in Pittsburgh are confident he will be one of the best in the league under the spell of the Pirate offensive. On the other hand, the backers of the two Poles argue that the Bucco punch next season, without Tony and Commy, will not be the best in the league,, as was the case this season. Piet, they point out, was the leading hitter on the club in 1932.

The fact that Manager Gibson really sought another Red pitcher—presumably Silas Johnson—is apt to take some of the edge off the ardor of those who think the Pirates prifited by the deal.

'Record' Gate Sees Hamas Beat Ramage

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Steve Hamas, young New Jersey heavyweight, outpointed Lee Ramage to the tune of a new all-time low record for attendance at Madison Square Garden.

Precisely 2,614 customers, contributing to net receipts of only $4,890, saw the former Penn State athlete plough his way to a decision over Ramage, San Diego (Cal.) youngster, over the 10-round route last night. Not in the memory of the oldest inhabitant have so few patrons paid so little money for a Garden boxing show.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

(Owing to the illness of Walter Winchell, this column is being written by Paul Yawitz until Mr. Winchell's recovery.)

The Wages of Cynicism

Say what you like and say what you will,
This is the payment Love requires:
A day of heartbreak for ev'ry thrill,
A week to burn in your own desires;

A month to weep for each secret kiss,
(Oh, poets will scoff, and gibe and sneer)
But laugh at their odes and remember this:
For a minute's pleasure you'll suffer a year.

For love doesn't last; it's the scar that shows,
Take it from one who really knows.

Promissory Notation!

Dave Vine relays the yarn about the landlord who knocked on Andrew MacMandelbaum's door and asked for the rent. The tenant's face fell long and heavy.

"I haven't got it," he replied.

"Didn't you promise you'd give it to me?" queried the landlord, impatiently.

To which MacMandelbaum retorted:

"Well, if I promised, then I'll give it!"

"But, when?"

"Ah, that I couldn't promise."

When You're in Love

According to Mignon Bushel, who is at the epigram-confecting age, "there is no greater kindness a woman can be shown than a man's cruelty, and no greater cruelty a man can be shown than a woman's kindness."

The Taxi Tax

Among the Things That Kept Us Awake this week is the concern over the moneys which the taxicab owners of this Pay Old City of Ours have collected (and still are collecting) in the form of a 5 cent tax per ride. Superior Court Justice Cohn has ruled the tax illegal, and the city is appealing to the higher courts in Albany.

There are a minimum of 30,000 cabs operating and they average $1 a day in tax fees. This means that in approximately one month they have taken $900,000 from the wayfarers' pockets. Which is a mess of What It Takes, sir! Now should the Appellate Court uphold Justice Cohn (and it appears quite possible) what disposition will be made of the grand total which, by that time, may have doubled itself? Certainly, it will be difficult to give it back to the riders.

But what worries us most is, what means is the city taking to insure the safety of the funds? The money is now in the hands of the fleet and private car owners and what assurance has anyone that one or two, or even more, may not be out of business before the matter is completely settled? And who is going to get the interest on that sizable fortune?

There are plenty of starving cabbies who could use a little assistance, not to mention the others in the army of unemployed.

I Don't Believe It

Goodman Ace, who once-was-a-columnist himself and should know better, reports that professional panhandlers are having things tougher and tougher. They find, he says, that they can't get a cent with just "Brother Can You Spare a Dime," but have to start way back with "Once I Built a Railroad."

Ouch!

"All-American" offers the one about Andrew MacMandelbaum who asked a caddie:

"Are ye guid at findin' balls, laddie?"

Eager to get the assignment, the boy chirped:

"Yes, sir, I'm very good at it!"

"Well, then," said Andy. "Find wan and we'll make a start."

To F. D. R.'s Defense

"I don't know if Pierre de Rohan is right in his contention that 'loaned' is a word which does not exist in English," writes Clem McCarthy, "but I do know that it exists on page 1265 of Webster's New International Dictionary (issue, 1927), thus: Loan, v. t. & i.; loaned; loan-ing. To lend:—sometimes with out.

"And under 'lend,' the same dictionary says: 'Loan, for lend, though common in the United States, is not an approved use, except sometimes in the financial language.

"As President Roosevelt was speaking of financial problems, was he not accurate enough in his use of 'loaned?'"

Righto

Black-jacks felled hundreds of voters in the recent elections, says Al Schwartz, which proves that it was the first time the citizens of New York used their heads at the polls.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal. Nov. 18.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

The Senate went out investigating, some went East, some went West and some went over the cuckoos nest. New Orleans, the home of the Sazerack cocktail, and the best food in America, but they won't stand investigation.

My good friend Senator Connally, of Texas, was among 'em and the committee has been making their entrances into the court room by sliding down the flag pole, and retiring through a trap door.

The Washington bunch with Pecora (the last word in digging up devilment on the evil-doer), and the California committee, who were looking into receiverships, and fake stock sales schemes (which are one and the same) found out Californians will buy anything in the way of stock if its phoney enough.

Yours, WILL.

Varied Acts In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Light, varied entertainment characterizes the Pitt vaudeville bill of fare for its new week, which, as far as the audience was concerned yesterday, proved reasonably satisfactory.

Especially popular was the personable Willie Solar who, in the character of a circus type clown, put over some good straight comedy. The Lander Brothers, a la Gallagher and Shean, also amused with some musical nonsense.

Tears, honest to goodness tears, made their appearance in the eyes of many a lady when Charles and Grace Keating did a sentimental bit about the son of the drunkard who is just "pore white trash" and couldn't marry the girl 'cause he never had no mother to guide him.

Dancing was the substance of the Allen and Pepper Revue as was the act of the Benson Massimo group. Allen and Pepper, though, offered legitimate dancing, while most of the Massimo's stepping is caricature work.

Rhythmical juggling of barrels, with the feet, was clevely done by Van Cello. Large, small, medium, it phased him not at all—he twirled the barrels in the air as if he were tossing around a rubber ball.

Jack Waller appeared as the inevitable comedy youth, with Jerry Lee, "the chatterbox," falling all over him.

On the screen Robert Armstrong and Helen Mack went through a series of foggy London thrills in "Blind Adventure," a mystery film.

Old Time Burlesque Variety Policy

The Variety, again managed by George Jaffe, will reopen tomorrow night with a midnight show. In reopening the theater, Jaffe announces that he will return to the old time form of burlesque. "Burlesk Revue," in two acts and 50 scenes, with a cast of 50 people will be the opening attraction. Lola Bartrum, former "Follies" beauty, is the featured feminine principal of the show. Recently in vaudeville, she is making her first appearance in Pittsburgh. "Burlesk Revue" is said to be the biggest show to ever play the Variety. In it are three Oriental dancers, five comedians, prima donnas and an ensemble of 20 girls. Among the principals are Diana Barton, Frances McAvoy, Bebe Tobin, Sammy Clark, John Barry, Harry (Shuffle) Le Van and Eddie Kaplin.

Miss Skinner Triumphs in Nixon

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Cornelia Otis Skinner's second evening of character portrayal brought some years of the Sixteenth century to the stage of the Nixon last night, and "The Wives of Henry VIII" were given the breath of life and the urge of inward feeling, each for a few minutes only, but long enough, when viewed in retrospection, to form a comparatively complete picture of the matrimonial career of the much-married king. Although there was but one actress—and what an actress—on the stage, and never more than one visible character, little imagination was needed to see there a colorful troop of others, so powerful was the suggestion.

There was the child Mary, later to be called "Bloody," who did a bidden courtsey to Anne Boleyn, and later shrunk in fear of her father, the king, as she listened to her pious Spanish mother, Catharine of Aragon, reply to him that she would enter a nunnery just as soon as she had heard that he had gone to join the monks in a monastery, a bit of repartee that marred not a bit the majesty of this, the most regal in aspect of all the queens of Henry, insofar as they were portrayed by Miss Skinner. And so they departed, Catharine and Mary, to pray for the king.

CUP OF BITTERNESS

Nor was Anne Boleyn, in the Tower of London, waiting for the summons to the headsman, without unseen company. To her companion and servitor, Madge, the unfortunate, passionate Anne poured out, in bitter drops, a more brimming cup than that that held the wine she craved to soften the picture of horror that confronted her. Hope that it was all a macabre jest gave way eventually to conviction and she, too, departed buoyed up by the thought that she had loved and that she was still pretty.

And so on through the entire gallery of portraits, the diffident Jane Seymour, hesitant to call her lord by his name, playing a game with her stepdaughter, Elizabeth; Anne of Cleves, speaking in thick German dialect to her attendants; Katheryn Howard, detected in a love tryst with Thomas Culpepper, for which she, too, was to lose her head, and finally, Katherine Parr, who knew how to manage his majesty—all came on the stage seemingly alone, but surrounded by persons as actual as themselves.

SOME MODERN WOMEN

Miss Skinner's presentation of these queens of dramatic history was preceded by four delightful depictions of other women, no less real, though of our own day. An American girl trying to telephone to a modiste in Paris proved that even the poorest of French can get by. A woman in a gondola in Venice found the moon the same size that it was when her husband proposed. A haglike habitue of Monte Carlo trembled through an explanation of why there must be a system to win. Best of all, for comedy, a Philadelphia mother doing a problem for her "dorling" and puzzled about "morbles" distributed among A. B. and C.

If the measure of an artist of the stage is to step out of one's own personality and assume that of another, and another, and another—all different—Miss Skinner is indeed a great artist.

This afternoon she presents again "The Love of Charles II" and tonight she will conclude her engagement with "The Empress Eugenie."

Repeal Views On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

That repeal has already brought a wet flood in addition to happiness and prosperity, is indicated in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. Pictures from New Orleans show that the lid seems to have not only been lifted but thrown away. In one of the city's famous bars crowds keep the bartenders busy handing out drinks and mixing the famous gin fizz. In New York, Oscar, of the Waldorf, serves a dinner to a party of guests and shows just how to drink and when, from cocktails to champagne, with the proper wine for every course. In Los Angeles the first shipload of legal gin arrives and is cordially welcomed. The Globe Trotter tells all about it.

Santa Claus is already on the job displaying new and wonderful toys to admiring children. Postmaster General Farley, in an appeal to the nation, urges that Christmas packages be mailed early.

In Tokio 70,000 Japanese rooters see the two leading college baseball teams play the "World's Series." They have their own Babe Ruth, who hits some mighty swats.

In Paris, France has its first drawing in the national lottery, and the biggest prize of all, $303,000, goes to a barber.

The dirigible Macon is shown joining the United States fleet in San Francisco.

The greatest mass marriage ever held shows 827 couples marching to the altar in Rome.

The Lindberghs are shown bidding farewell to France and hopping off to Holand.

The racing season at Bowie, Md., opens with turf fans braving bitter cold. The feature race of the day is for charity.

Impressive scenes at Lourdes shrine show 10,000 ex-soldiers making a pilgrimage to pray for peace.

Royal Family Grows

DOLORES AND JOHN BARRYMORE, DOLORES, JR., AND JOHN, JR., NICE FAMILY GROU

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Football Hero

THE FOOTBALL season is rapidly drawing to a close, and I'm sorry that such is the case. I'm daffy about football, and I'd attend a game every day of the week if they'd stage one for me. Provided, of course, that the fresh air didn't kill me after the first three or four games.

Football grips me more than any other sport I have ever watched. I've never played the game, for which my mother and father are duly thankful, and I don't know a box formation from an end zone. But I do know that a good football match thrills me—and whenever I can get a thrill in life, I don't stop to ask for whys and wherefores.

You take that game, for example, that was played here between Fordham and St. Mary's a few weeks ago. Together with Mr. Perry Charles, who has been tutoring me in the various analytical angles of the game, I generally broadcast the Columbia football games each Saturday afternoon. But on this particular afternoon, Columbia was playing out of town. So I was enabled to attend the Fordham game without offending my customary listeners-in, if any.

At that St. Mary's game were some 60,000 people. I had been, I suppose, a bit more foolish than most of them. Many of them, no doubt, had made small wagers on the outcome of the game. But I had plunged plenty deeply on the Fordham outfit. And every time the St. Mary's team completed a play, I almost fell out of my box.

But I'm a funny sort of mug. As the game progressed, I forgot all about my wagers. I even forgot about the game, as a game. I have a habit of seeing tragedy in the laughter of others, and comedy in so many things that seem tragic to the world. Just a bit nuts, as the saying goes.

So there I sat, watching a thrilling game—and wondering how the players felt about it down there on the field. A misstep, or a particularly hard tackle, might mean a severe injury. A long run might mean a headline, the toughest thing in the world to cash. And a dumb play might mean laughing raps from coast to coast; raps that the boy would never be able to live down.

And all for what* Hero for an hour—and then, in 99 out of 100 cases, oblivion for a lifetime. A strange thing, this business of being a football hero . . .

The game was over, and I had enjoyed myself mightly. I had lost my money, my flask and my voice. I was cold. I had a headache and my leg was throbbing. But I wouldn't have taken anything for that great game. A strange thing, this business of being a football addict.

Later—much later—in the day, I went to the Paradise cabaret to listen to an hour of Whiteman music before hitting the hay. And there I was introduced to three of the boys who had cost me so much dough during the afternoon. They were "Ice House" Wilson, St. Mary's star back; Yates, the center, and a blond young man whose name I cannot remember at the moment.

They were nice kids; swell, really. Totally unaffected and different from many of the players on the eastern campuses. The boys were familiar with my junk, having read it from time to time in the Oakland (Cal.) Post-Inquirer. And we got along splendidly—in spite of that fact.

Before any of us quite realized it, we were talking in heart-to-heart fashion and I was asking the very questions that had been in my mind that afternoon.

They were football stars now; what were their ambitions for the future? Wilson was very definite. He wants to be a big league ball player. The blond boy was undecided, but he thought he would like to be—of all things—a customs inspector. Yates was dancing with a petty young lady when this question arose—so I hesitated to ask him his ambition at the moment.

Were they nervous before a big game? Terribly! They were very certain about that. There were times, they confessed, when they wished they could run away from the field instead of trotting out upon it. But once the game got under way, they forgot everything but the business in hand.

It was my turn again.

"Look, fellows," I said earnestly, "I don't want you to be offended by this question, but it's been on my mind and I want to learn something. What do fellows like yourselves get out of football anyhow?"

"I never attended any college seriously, so I don't know much about this alma mater business. Is this the big kick? Is it all for that? I can't figure it out.

"You travel some 3,000 miles to get here. You play before 60,000 people, and you risk your necks and reputations. And what, really, do you get out of it? Not even a ticket to the game!"

It was Wilson who disagreed with me.

"You're wrong, Mr. Hellinger," he replied, "each player on the team gets two tickets on the fifty-yard line for the game. Of course, we have to pay for them."

"Oh, of course," I agreed sarcastically.

"And a funny thing happened with our seats," the great back went on. "They cost us $5.50 a pair, and we were afraid we wouldn't be able to get rid of them. So we sold them before the game for $4.50 a pair. It actually cost us a dollar each to play in that game."

Girl Now in Play To Be Film Star

Ferreted out by Paramount talent scouts while playing a leading role in Dwight Wyman's current Broadway stage success, "Champagne Sec," Kitty Carlisle, 21-year-old New Orleans girl, has been signed by Paramount to a long-term contract and will be groomed for screen stardom. She will remain in New York, continuing with the stage production, until assigned to her first Paramount role. Until a little more than a year ago, she had not appeared on the professional stage. Her first engagement was the lead in a road company of Florenz Ziegfeld's, "Rio Rita." Until she took her Paramount tests she had never been inside a film studio.

Fan Dance Sal Signs for Short

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18.—Just watch Paramount burn when they find out that Sally Rand has agreed to do her famous fan dance in a two-reeler for RKO.

Under her agreement with Paramount, the former Wampas baby star came out here to work in two feature pictures. Studio officials have been congratulating themselves on scooping the industry.

But in a telegram to RKO, the little dancer who gave the big shock to Chicago and to New York,, promised to work four days for $2,500. The short subject will be called "The Fan Dance" and it will be made by Lou Brock.

To satisfy consershop regulations, Sally will do one version of her dance with two fans and another with a single span of ostrich feathers.

Meanwhile, the dancer has relented in her refusal to make a personal appearance for Paramount and is booked into a San Francisco theater.

It must be love. Veree Teasdale, who is an actress and not a singer, was called on to warble a number at Warner Brothers for "King of Fashion." Hearing she was nervous, Adolphe Menjou motored all the way from Palm Springs to sit with her on the set and to hold her hand. After the number was filmed, he climbed back into his car and drove back to the desert.

Back in 1921, William Grossman made his debut in La Scala Opera House in Milan. He had a fine tenor voice and a career of definite promise. Then he went to his native Germany for a vacation on a farm. In a tragic accident, a tine of a pitchfor was thrust into his throat. Since that time he has had numerous operations. He can strike a true note, but he can't sing beyond five bars of music. The doctors hold out no hope. So today he is a prop man at the Paramount studio in Hollywood.

There will be no immediate reconciliation between Gloria Stuart and her sculptor-husband, for the blonde actress plans to sail for China as soon as she finishes her current picture. A woman friend will accompany her and they will be gone for many weeks.

Here is one that ought to bring the furrows to the Will Hays forehead. Kathleen Byrne, a girl who claims to have been a professional corespondent in 28 divorce cases, will be given a leading role in Majestic Pictures' forthcoming "Diary of a Bad Woman." Miss Byrne originally was hired to act as technical adviser on a divorce film. They took tests and found she was a screen type.

Marxes Mad, Not Sad, In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Mr. Seibel

What is the title of the picture at the Penn Theater? It doesn't matter. Any title would do as well. It is the maddest hurly-burly of nonsense those past masters of idiocy—the four Marxes — ever mixed with music and served with bombs of mirth.

After a brief introduction that lets us know we are in Freedonia, Groucho is installed as the new ruler of that comic-opera realm, and then anything and everything begins to happen. It keeps on happening until the sides of the audience must ache with violent volcanic tremors.

Don't ask what it's all about? The audience does not know and it is doubtful whether the four Marxes knew. They just let loose, and a Mickey Mouse comedy cartoon looks like a quilting bee alongside of this merry-go-round of absurdities.

Groucho would reconcile even Herr Hitler to this sort of Marxism. It is a delirious spasm of nonsensical ideas jumbled into gorgeous imbecility.

"Duck Soup" it is called—but it might as well be called "Dill Pickle Pie." When war is declared against Freedonia, you would think all the clowns in the circus had been conscripted. History gets hysterical.

To define the plot would be like chasing eels up a greased pole, or explaining the Einstein theory to a traffic cop. Don't bother—eat "Duck Soup" and laugh.

Noted Indian Catcher In Movie Cast

Chief Myers, Indian athlete, who two decades ago won fame as a catcher for the New York Giants, has been signed for the role of a tribal chieftain in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Laughing Boy." This film has Ramon Novarro and Lupe Valez in leading roles.

STOCK MARKET PACE QUIET AND EVEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—The stock market moved at a quiet but even pace in the early trading today, after an initial bulge led by farm implement and other specialty shares. Rails were a trifle mixed, Santa Fe losing a point. Metals recovered mildly from yesterday's shakeout, while oils were steady.

Steadiness prevailed in American Telephone, General Motors, Standard Oil of California, United States Steel and New York Central. Advances of sizable fractions to around a point occurred in du Pont, United States Smelting, Chrysler and Westinghouse, while initial advances of 1 to 3 points were about halved in Case, Harvester, Deere, American Can and Allied Chemical.

The maintenance of the domestic gold price at $33.56 an ounce, which has remained unchanged since Tuesday, was no surprise to the financial district, which feels that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation desires a steadier dollar for the time being. The British pound sterling jumped 7½ cents in early dealings to $5.27½, and francs firmed .07 of a cent at 6.38 cents. Based on this sterling rate, the dollar equivalent of the London gold price was $33.80.

Wall street's principal interest in the resumption of diplomatic relations with Russia, of course, was in the prospects for an early expansion of trade with the Soviets. Observers conversant with the Russian situation believe that the Bolshevik nation is ready to place orders here for some $500,000,000 of cotton, machine tools, electrical equipment, railway materials and other goods. Credit, however, will have to be arranged and this, it is thought, may require some time. It was believed, though, that some form of guarantee might be arranged by the Washington government.

The firming of commodity prices as reported by the Department of Labor, was encouraging to industrial circles that have been hoping for higher levels. The department's index, which includes 784 weighted commodities, advanced from 70.8 for September to 71.2 for October. The October index, it was pointed out, averaged the same as the 1931 month and is comparable with 64.4 in October, 1932.

GOLD REMAINS AT $33.56

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Definite indication that the administration has applied the brakes—at least temporarily—to its gold purchase experiment was seen today when for the fifth consecutive day the price of the yellow metal was quoted unchanged at $33.56 an ounce.

There has been no change now since Tuesday, in contrast to the daily mark-up that prior thereto had featured the policy.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(INS.)—For the first time in several weeks the international gold price was not changed today, yesterday's price of 128 shillings, two-pence per ounce being maintained.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—The excitement over the American dollar's gyrations, which dominated the exchange market in the past week, was absent today with a lack of new developments. Fluctuations were within a 6 cent limit, with a slightly depreciatory trend, the dollar closing at 5.27¾ to the pound, compared to the opening figure of 5.24 after 4.29¼ had been touched.

The French franc was somewhat weaker, closing at 82.65—near the day's low.

LOCAL MARKET ENDS WEEK QUIETLY

A few slight changes were noted in the price structures on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange in the short week-end session today. The trend was indistinct with the fluctuations confined mainly to the smaller fractions. Hesitancy noted here was in line with operations on the "big board" where prices washed back and forth uncertainly but, on the whole, maintaining a fairly firm tone. The market seemed unable to make up its mind as to the significance of the maintenance of the United States gold buying at the same rate it has paid for five days. Likewise, the Russian recognition seemed to be ignored as a market factor.

The dealings here consisted of a few scattered trades with no concentration of activity in any particular stock or group. Lone Star held steady around $6. The company ordered the regular dividend on the common stock. D. L. Clark dropped the one-point gain recorded at mid-week. Slight recessions were noted in the early quotations on Shamrock Oil and Carnegie Metals.

Rise in Exchange Spurs Hide Market

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—Rising foreign exchanges against the dollar have effectively shut off for the time being buying by American tanners of hides and skins in foreign markets and also have caused Europeans to turn to American markets for hides and to some extent for leather.

NOVEMBER BOND CALLS

Aggregate of $14,083,450 bond redemption scheduled for November, 1933, is smaller than the October total of $16,536,900 and the November, 1932, figure of $28,211,725. It comprises $11,530,000 called in entirety and $2,553,450 called in part, generally to satisfy sinking fund requirements.

The second knitwear industrial exposition will be held in Grand Central Palace, New York City, from February 12 to February 16, it was announced by A. B. Coffman, manager. The National Knitted Outwear Association, which is sponsoring the show, will hold its annual convention at the same time.

HAVANA ELECTRIC RAILWAY

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Some losses appear in bank clearings this week. The total for all leading cities in the United States, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., of $4,313,100,000 was 6.7 per cent above that for the same week of last year. At New York City clearings were $3,020,009,000, an increase of 11.9 per cent, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,293,091,000 showed a decline of 2.8 per cent.

The increase was largely at New York. Armistice Day was observed at a number of points and clearings there covered only five business days. Eleven of the 20 outside cities report an increase, but it is generally small. These include Boston, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Omaha, Richmond, Atlanta, Dallas, San Francisco and Portland. Declines at Baltimore and Cleveland were again quite heavy; the reduction this week was also somewhat larger at Philadelphia. This weeks clearings exceed those for the five days of last week by $110,954,000; a year ago the increase was $648,126,000.

Figures for leading centers, showing increases and decreases as compared with those of last year, are printed herewith; also daily bank clearings for the year to date:

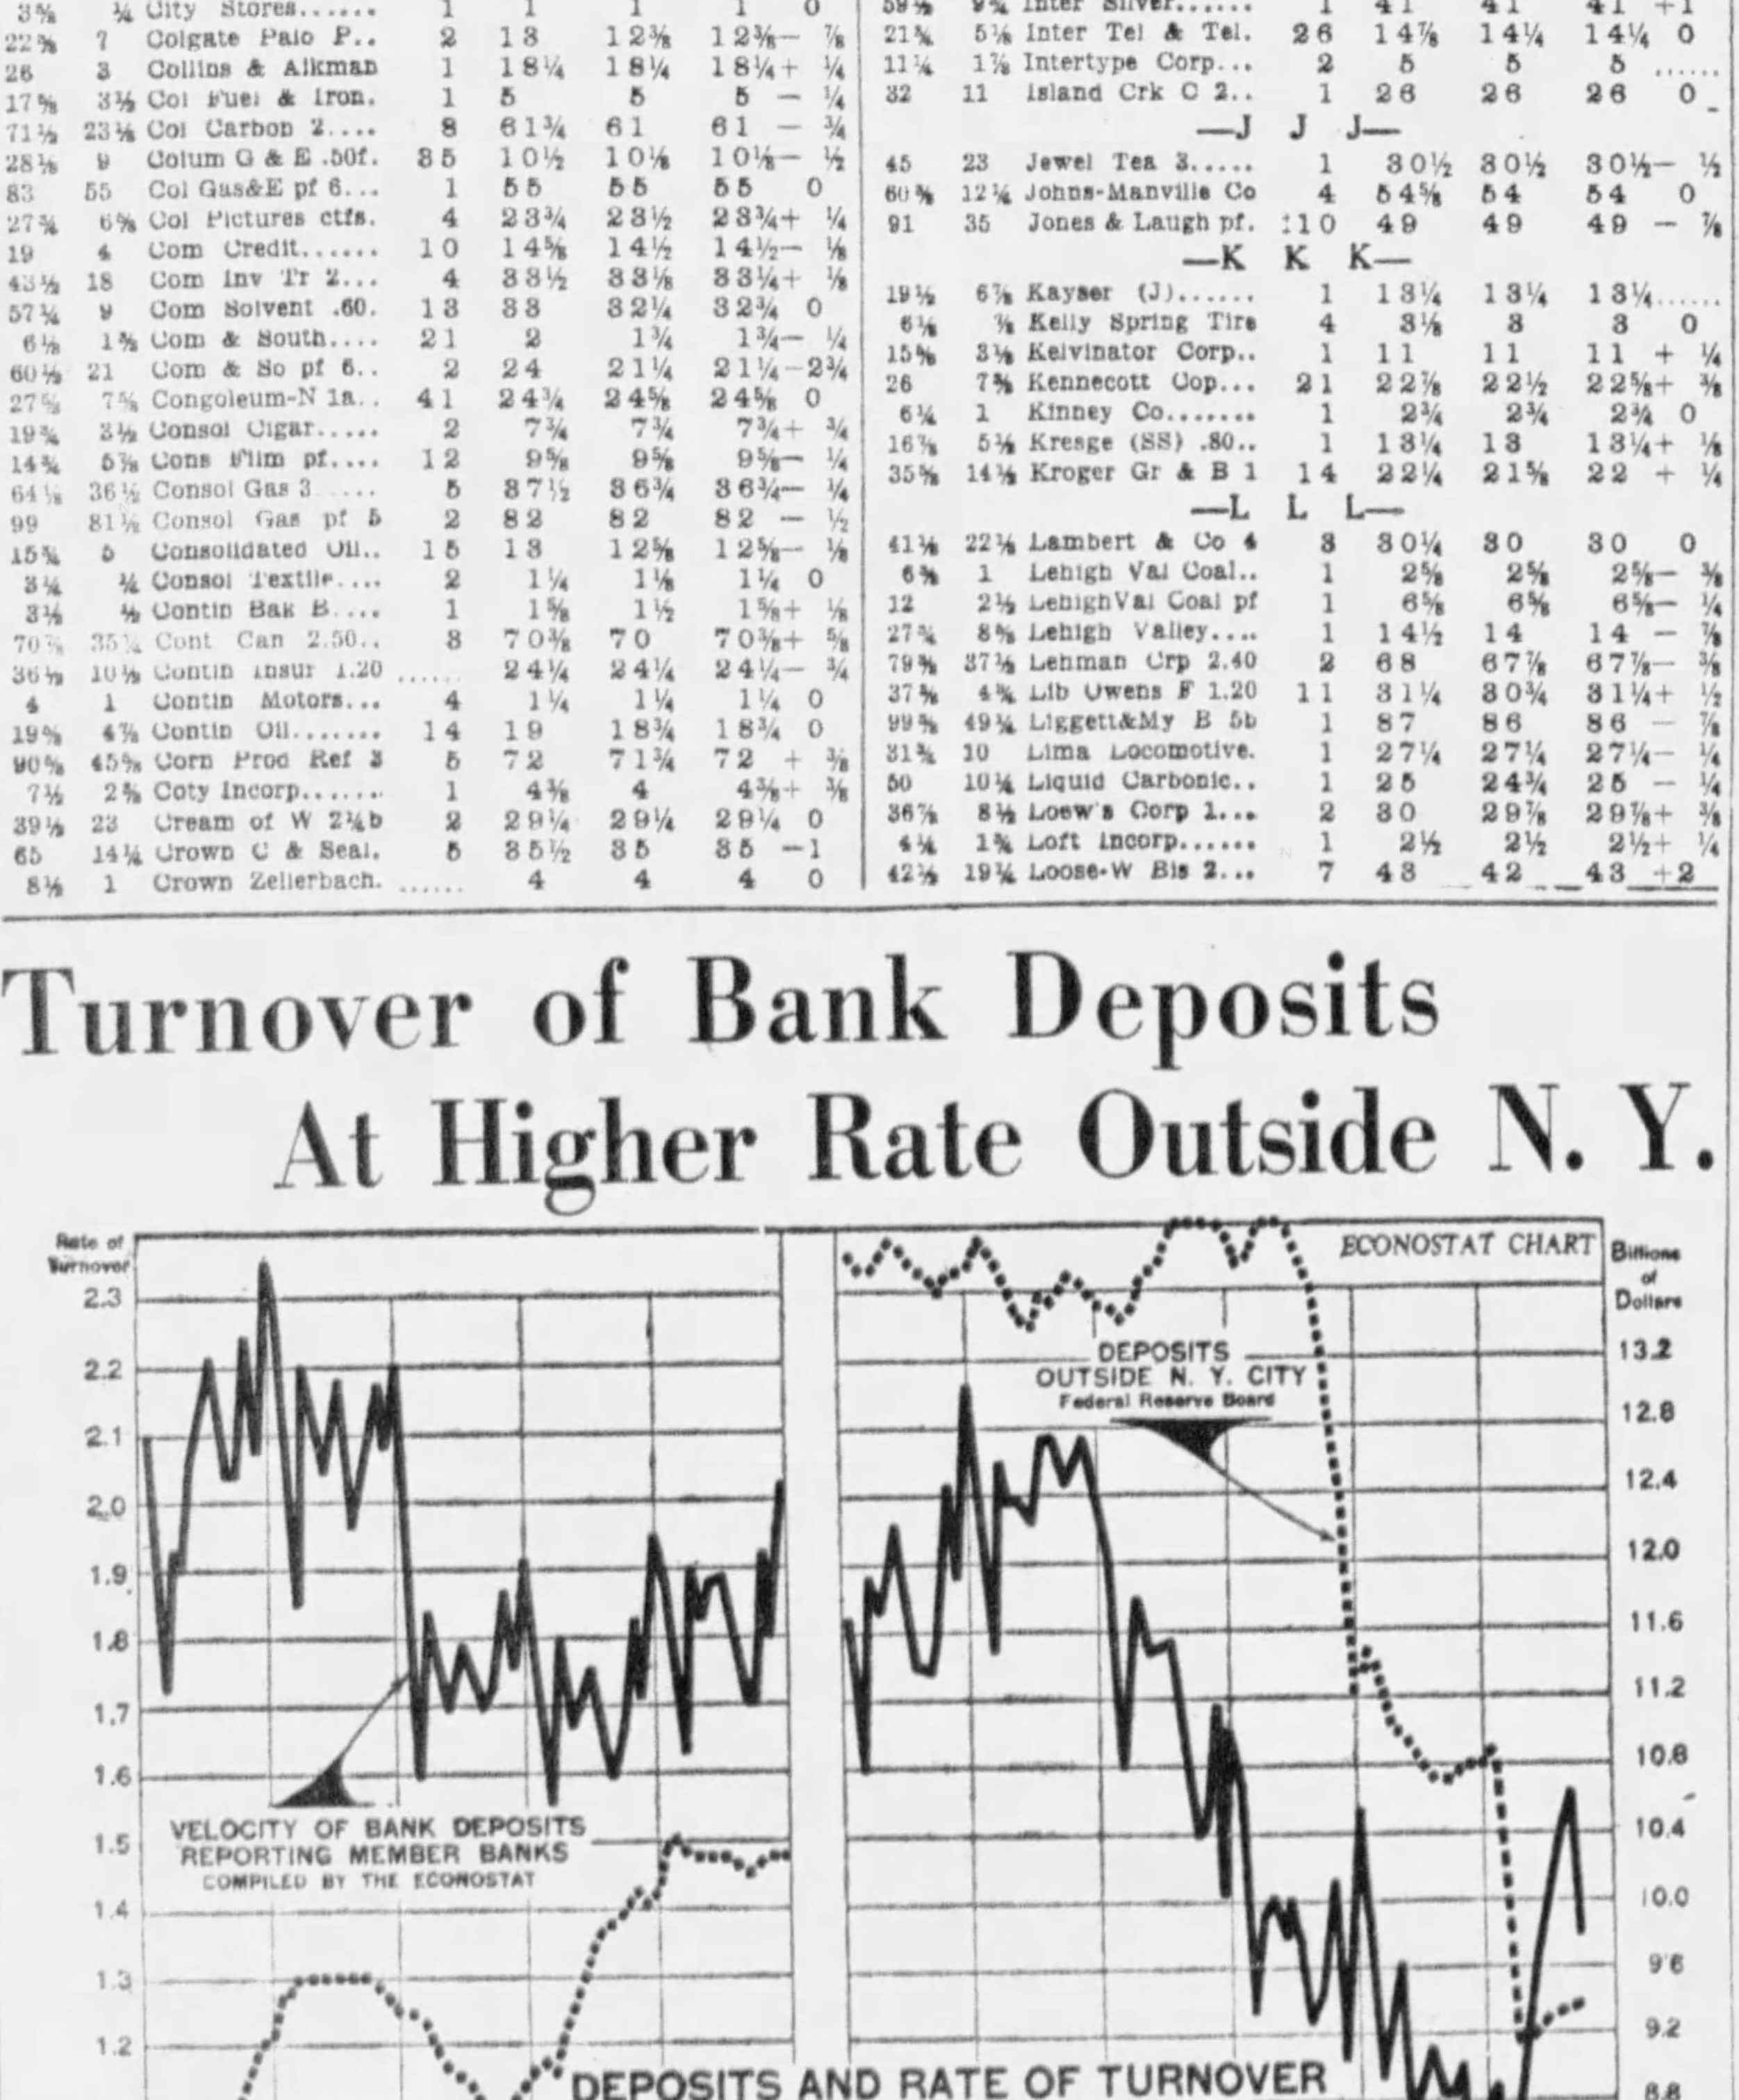
Turnover of Bank Deposits At Higher Rate Outside N.Y.



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Editor, The Econostat

This chart is the second of a series showing a comparison between the war and post-war cycle and the cycle through which the country is still passing. It shows outside of New York City and the rate at which these deposits turn over. If this chart is compared with yesterday's chart, certain very striking differences will be noted.

In the first place, the velocity of bank deposits outside of New York City reached its peak at the end of 1919. Throughout the latter part of that year and the greater part of 1920 money outside of New York City was functioning at a much higher rate than at any time during the boom period that reached its climax at the end of 1929. It tends to demonstrate that the center of the speculative tempest in 1928 and 1929 was located in New York City, whereas in 1919 and 1920 it was located in the area outside the financial capital.

Expressing the matter in another way we might say that 1919-1920 was essentially an agricultural inflation in which prices and activity in the area outside New York City reached their greatest intensity. The metropolis itself shows only a mild flurry of sympathetic accompaniment. The drop in velocity and in deposits during 1921 was far more severe outside of New York City than within the city.

If we turn now to the period 1928-1933 we find that the rate of deposit turnover outside New York City shows little change from the preceding period, whereas the rate of New York City climbs to feverish heights. The decline in the rate of turnover outside New York City in the period 1929-1933 is less severe than that within the city itself.

We will put the matter in this fashion: Where a dollar of deposits did $4 worth of work in 1929 it performed only $1 of money work at the end of 1932. The corresponding changes in outside deposits are two and one. When we consider the recovery we find that in so far as deposit turnover is concerned it has been much more pronounced outside New York City than within New York City.

DEADLOCK ENDS, HOGS LOWER

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP.)—Thousands of hogs were on the run today with buyers striving to relieve the clogged condition of the market following the breaking of the "sellers' strike." Word that the strike was over came late yesterday with announcement that commission men would meet the lower bids of packers. It was followed by sales at $4.35 down that continued long after closing hours. Estimates today were that of the 45,000 on hand probably from 20,000 to 30,000 changed hands.

Starting 10 days ago, the strike found sellers first demanding $4.50, then $4.60 and finally dropping their price three times yesterday to meet the $4.35 bid.

Ore Consumption Down in October

CLEVELAND, Nov. 18.—Lake Superior iron ores consumed by furnaces in October amounted to 1,897,589 tons compared with 2,102,076 tons in September and 735,010 tons in October, 1932, according to the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association.

Ore on hand at furnaces and Lake Erie docks on October 31, totaled 36,345,473 tons, as against 32,456,007 tons at the end of September and 32,456,607 tons at the end of October, 1932.

Out of 233 furnaces available, 71 were in blast November 1, compared with 81 on October 1.

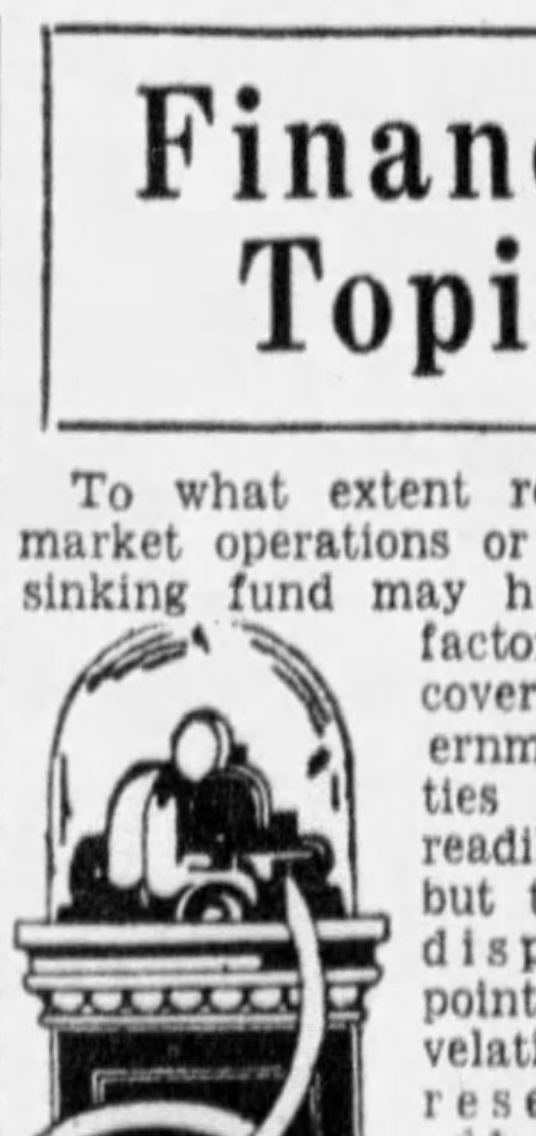
Federal Bonds Respond To Control Shown In Gold Game



To what extent reserve open market operations or buying for sinking fund may have been a factor in the recovery in government securities was not readily apparent, but there was a disposition to point to the revelation that the reserve had added only $2,000,000 to its holdings the past week, the smallest indicated rise in many months. Observers were satisfied that the firming up of governments reflected chiefly the indicated decision of the administration to tread more carefully in its gold buying operations, presumably with a view to bolstering federal securities.

Wall street had little doubt as to the issue of the Roosevelt-Litvinoff conversations and the final word of Russian recognition seemed to have had scant influence; aside from monetary matters, markets had little to occupy their attention. The decline in car loadings last week was according to seasonal expectancy, but volume was above a year ago for the twenty-seventh consecutive week. Further improvement in retail trade was noted by the Dun & Bradstreet Review, which said distribution of merchandise had gained momentum.

Conservative stock market opinion still favors the oil and metal group and most of the business is still going into those departments. One trader remarked that nine-tenths of his operations in the last two weeks have been in shares of these two industries. Brokers say there is a better demand for railroad shares than in some time and that New York Central has been aggressively purchased in the last couple of days by people who follow the carrier group.

Armour & Co. is contemplating the formulation of a new plan which will provide for a readjustment of fixed assets valuations and of the capital structure so as to eliminate legal obstacles to the payment of preferred dividends as earnings justify. The company will submit such a plan to stockholders as soon as is possible. No indication was given by officials following the directors' meeting as to the probable general outline of the proposed capital and asset readjustment as it is still in very rough stages.

Representatives of the San Francisco, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and Boston stock exchanges as well as one member of the New York Curb Exchange, will be invited to sit on the board of administration of the Brokers' Code of Fair Competition. In accordance with code provisions, five exchange members, including one from the Curb, will be members of their local association of stock exchange firms, while the sixth will not be a member of any association. The association of New York Stock Exchange firms will meet next Monday and elect five of their members to the board of administration, making a total of 11.

Auto Industry Wants No Governmental Straitjacket

By B. C. FORBES

DETROIT, Nov 18. — The automotive industry doesn't want to be put into a straitjacket by the government.

Executives declare that constant vigilance is essential to keep in tune with and abreast of the times. Initiative is the very life-blood of a successful motor company.

Mr. Forbes

Kaleidoscopic changes in public taste, in public preferences, in the public's purse, necessitate ceaseless experimentation, ceaseless innovation, ceaseless bettering of manufacturing and marketing processes.

MANUFACTURERS privately express most emphatic disapproval of unlimited expansion of bureaucratic dictatorship.

As already told in this column, automobile manufacturers are seriously considering the advisability of not renewing the NRA code when it expires at the end of this year.

HOW SUBSTANTIAL improvement has been in the automotive industry this year is reflected vividly by the sales of leading makers.

In the last 10 months Chevrolet's (car and truck) sales have totaled over 550,000 against 354,500 a year ago, a 55.4 per cent gain, and against 378,811 for the whole of 1932.

More amazing: 950,000 used cars have been purchased this year from Chevrolet dealers. A year ago the total was under 838,000.

In its price class Chevrolet 1933 registrations have reached 45 per cent of the U. S. total. Also 49.4 per cent of all trucks sold in its weight class. This leadership margin is the widest in the company's history. W. E. Holler, Chevrolet general sales manager, tells me:

"Prices for 1934 have not been determined, but as all commodity and labor costs have increased, car prices must go up. Chevrolet increased wages 20 per cent. And it is common knowledge that the cost of steel, cotton, textiles, rubber, and all other raw materials are appreciably higher.

"We firmly believe business is going to be better. Every indication points to increased Chevrolet volume in 1934.

"Today Chevrolet has 1,000 dealers in its national organization, employing approximately 25,000 retail salesmen, and these, together with the service representatives, bring the sales and service personnel actively employed above 50,000 individuals, the largest single retailing selling organization in the industry."

PONTIAC'S new president, H. J. Klingler, formerly the go-getting commander-in-chief of Chevrolet's sales force, has established headquarters at the plant in Pontiac, described as "the most modern in the country." Considerable new building is planned. Facilities for producing a thousand cars a day are available.

President Klingler is concentrating on preparing for staging their 1934 line. "It will be a knockout," he beamed.

THE CHRYSLER organization has been making extraordinary strides—reflected by a rise in the company's shares from $8 to well above $50.

One evidence of expansion: A mammoth new Chrysler-De Soto sales and office building, over 500 feet long, is being rushed to completion.

The architecture is distinctive while the interior includes a first floor salesroom, 336 by 50 feet, entirely free of columns, with continuous plate glass exposure from floor to ceiling.

Some other notable Chrysler facts:

H. G. Moock, Plymouth general sales manager, announces that Plymouth leads all motor cars in October registrations in Rhode Island, that it was first in sales in more than a dozen cities and second in nine states. He added:

"Every month gives Plymouth a greater portion of the business in the low priced field; sales have already doubled in the last year."

The latest week's sales (4,172) represented an increase of 622 per cent over a year ago.

General Sales Manager A. Van Derzee, of Dodge, another Chrysler star performer, reports an increase in passenger car deliveries by dealers this year of 232 per cent, while truck deliveries are up fully 175 per cent.

This month witnessed the largest November week in the company's history.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Fort Pitt Brewing Company reports for the fiscal year ended October 31, last, net income of $81,919, after deductions, including estimated federal taxes. This is equal to 16 cents a share on the 500,000 shares of capital stock outstanding. Total current assets October 31 amounted to $192,835, and current liabilities, $74,376.

Pittston Company report for quarter ended September 30, last, shows consolidated net profit of $44,228, after depreciation, depletion, amortization, interest, taxes and minority interest, etc. This compares with net loss of $297,664 in the third quarter of 1932. For nine months ended September 30, 1933, consolidated net loss was $732,068, against net loss of $1,177,891 in the first nine months of 1932.

Austin Nichols and Company reports for six months ended October 31, last, net profit of $76,838, after depreciation, interest, federal taxes, etc., compared with net loss of $57,060 in the six months ended October 31, 1932.

SMALL BUYERS BUOY STEEL MARKET

By B. E. V. LUTY

A distinctly better tone has developed in the steel market in the last week. No definite increase in buying is observed, but there is certainly no decrease, and mills find their customers in more hopeful mood.

The improvement in tone is not due to, but is reinforced by, an increase in steel production, the official report covering the current week forecasting production at 27.1 per cent of capacity, against 25.2 per cent last week and 26.1 per cent the week before.

The trade has no definite hope that this showing for a single week suggests that a turn has been rounded, but it feels that a definite favorable development has occurred in that there is fluctuation when it had been regarded as more or less probable that there would be declines almost week by week to the end of the year.

As a result of the upturn the estimate of a week ago, that this year would run about two-thirds above 1932, may be revised upward slightly, a gain of a shade more than two-thirds now being likely. The last nine months will be much more than double the same period of last year, the first quarter having been off 30 per cent from the same quarter of 1932.

An outstanding feature of the buying is that it is almost wholly by small consumers, who place carload orders at more or less regular intervals, while the usually large buyers are conspicuous by their almost complete absence.

AUTOMOBILE RATE LOW

The automobile industry has just gotten down to a very low rate of production, probably nearly if not quite its lowest point in the seasonal dip, and has such stocks of steel that it is now taking virtually no steel even for such production as it has. The experts find it difficult to predict how soon the industry will limber up.

Prospects for oil country tubular goods, which have been very dull lately, have been looking up in the last week or two as some drilling is contemplated in various fields despite the general restriction of oil production. Some drilling has to be done to protect properties.

There is virtually no building outside of that involving fabricated structural steel. There is not much of that but awards have run slightly heavier in the last four weeks than earlier in the year and there is a sprinkling of commercial work, including brewery and distillery building, instead of awards being confined almost exclusively to bridges.

The railroads have just begun to get into the picture, by way of rail purchases. Chicago and Northwestern this week bought 5,000 tons and Missouri-Kansas-Texas lines 4,700 tons. Recently the Pennsylvania system indicated its intention to buy 100,000 tons with its own funds, and the Baltimore and Ohio system 35,000 to 50,000 tons. It is expected that the program for the railroads to buy a total of 845,000 tons will be carried out. There will scarcely be much rolling of these rails before February. Track accessories are to be taken freely and car and locomotive repair material will come next.

PRICE RISE RUMORED

Price advances to be fully effective on contracts for deliveries during the first quarter must be filled by next Monday so as to become effective on December 1, when contracting for first quarter becomes permissible. There have been various rumors as to possible advances, referring to semi-finished steel, wire products, strips and sheets. Bars, shapes and plates are unlikely to be advanced as the advances effective September 30 came after buyers quite generally had covered for the present quarter. An advance in tin plate has long been regarded as a virtual certainty by reason of increased costs generally and the stiff advance in pig iron, lately more than 30 cents a pound above its price of a year ago.

The scrap market makes a better showing in that heavy melting steel has not softened in the last week, after four weeks of declines at 25 cents a week, while possibilities have developed of there being some mill buying soon.

MONEY SAFEST IN U. S. A.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Capital is committing "another serious blunder by rushing to transfer dollars into foreign currencies when billions of American dollars are already bemired in Europe," Louis Guenther, publisher of the Financial World, declared. He said:

"Timid owners of dollars are rushing to transfer them into foreign currencies and other alien obligations, thinking thereby to provide a safer haven of security than our own monetary unit. What they overlook in their calculations is that the currency of any country is no safer than its national wealth or its credit backing. We spent money lavishly on an idealistic war to save the world from destruction. Did we succeed? No. Europe is today an armed camp.

"We spent additional billions of our funds to aid in the reconstruction of devastated Europe. We are whistling for the return of the bulk of this capital—apparently in vain. Our debtors are pleading poverty as an excuse for not paying their debts to us. Yet, our blind capital regards their currencies and securities as sounder than our own. It is like asking a defaulter to take care of and safeguard our possessions.

"The most secure place for American dollars is at home."

WHEAT PRICES TAKE DROP

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Grain prices averaged lower early today after an irregular start. With Washington quotations on gold unaltered and with sterling at some decline, uncertainties of the monetary outlook had a bearish effect. Opening ⅝ off to ⅞ up, wheat afterward sagged all around. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ lower, and subsequently underwent a general decline.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

WISHES ARE NOT ALWAYS FACTS IN ECONOMICS

By LEWIS HANEY,

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Are we "wish thinkers?"

That is, do we want something, and then adjust our reasoning according to our wish, so as to prove that what we want is good and feasible?

For example, most of us want temperance and an end of the old saloon evils. So some jumped to the conclusion that prohibition is good and feasible. Later we find by experience that it does not work well and does not give us what we want.

WOULD ADJUST DOLLAR

Just so, we all want more stable prices, and an end to declining markets. So some jump to the conclusion that we should prohibit price declines by "fixing prices," and others propose to stabilize prices by fixing the "average" price.

The other evening I heard one of the "rubber dollar" economists argue. He said:

"We will take some average of commodity prices as our basis. Then we will adjust the gold content of the dollar so as to keep the average of prices steady.

"If some particular prices go up, other prices must go down, because the average will be kept unchanged."

AVERAGE NOT CAUSE

Now it is true, of course, that assuming an average of prices to remain unchanged, some items must have gone down if some have gone up.

But this does not mean that attempts to control the average will enable us to control the individual prices which make up the average.

The average is a result, not a cause. It is figured from the prices of the individual commodities included in the average, and depends upon what they are.

You can't regulate the height of any given building by passing a law that the average height of buildings shall be so and so.

We may wish for higher prices or stable prices, but that should not make us reason that we can control any particular prices by working on an average price.

MIGHT SOON CEASE

I heard another economist say that we must have expansion of circulation. Certainly, we all want to see this, and what he meant was that when business gets good there will be expansion. There is no disagreement about that.

But should our wishes lead us to incorrect thinking? Should we try to get a result without a cause?

To my mind, it is difficult to see how we can get a real and lasting expansion unless it comes as the result of better business conditions. A forced circulation of money, which no one wants, is apt to stop as soon as the force is stopped.

"HELP" MAY BE HARM

Again, we all want strong banks. We wish our banks to have ample capital—and if wishes would do it banks would never fail.

So we decide to have the government borrow money and advance it to weak banks by buying their preferred stocks. We even try to cover up the implication of weakness by making the strong banks take the government's advances along with the weak ones.

But in doing this, and similar things, we weaken the government's credit. Government bonds then go down, and as they are one of the chief assets of the banks, we find that we may be hurting banks as much as helping them.

"If wishes were horses beggars might ride."

But if we want to ride really, we have got to think straight. This we cannot do if we deal with price averages, expansion and banking soundness without considering the causes which alone can give the desired results.

Heavy Engineering Contracts Expand

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Larger lettings for highways and other public works projects lifted the volume of heavy engineering contracts to $36,951,000 in the week ended November 13, says Engineering News-Record. Federal awards aggregated $15,900,000, the second largest weekly figure in this classification for the year.

Republic Steel Reaches Profitable Basis Of Operations

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE REPUBLIC STEEL Corporation established itself on a profitable basis in the third quarter after reporting losses during most of the depression.

Such results in a period during which only a portion of the steel industry was able to pull out of the red indicates that the management has overcome many of the difficulties in coordinating the units merged to form the present company in 1930.

The consolidation left the new organization with many duplications of production facilities and selling organizations. A long period of time usually is needed to eliminate this costly duplication of effort. Republic, under the pressure of depression conditions, has completed most of this work of coordination in a comparatively short time.

Earns Net of 24 Cents On Preferred Shares

THE OBSTACLES faced by Republic make the results for the third quarter of particular interest. Net profit after deducting depreciation, depletion, interest and dividends on the preferred stock of the Trumbull Cliffs Furnace Company, a subsidiary, was $148,239. This was equivalent to 24 cents a share on 595,608 shares of 6 per cent Republic preferred stock.

In the three months ended June 30 the net loss after all deductions was $407,451. In the quarter ended March 31 it was $2,521,568.

The increase in the volume of steel production last summer had much to do with the improvement in Republic's results. The elimination of duplication of effort, however, appears to have been a major factor in replacing a large loss with a small profit.

* * *

Results for Final Quarter Uncertain

REPUBLIC'S COSTS have been increased under the NRA code and the volume of steel buying has declined during recent months. These influences make the results for the final three months of the year uncertain.

But the fact that a profit was reported for the third quarter indicates that Republic will be able to show satisfactory results whenever it has at least a moderate volume of business.

PRESSURE GAINS FOR DOLLAR STABILIZATION

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Although President Roosevelt is a Harvard man, the Cornell School of Economics, as expounded by Prof. George F. Warren, is now in the saddle.

Mr. Rukeyser

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., a former student of Mr. Warren, is Acting Secretary of the Treasury, and he has been succeeded in another key financial post, namely that of governor of the Farm Credit Administration, by William I. Myers, of New York, who was professor of farm finance at Cornell and who is regarded as an ardent supporter of the Warren commodity dollar, with which Mr. Morgenthau is believed to be in sympathy.

Presidential conversations this week, however, with Alfred E. Smith, Bernard M. Baruch, J. P. Morgan and Myron C. Taylor make it clear that he has heard at first hand some of the views of the financial district concerning his monetary policy.

URGE DECLARATION

Recognizing the extent to which the country is already committed to a new monetary policy, the "sound money" group has somewhat shifted its position. I gather that it would now be willing to accept devaluation of the dollar, provided the President would agree to stabilize promptly and return to the gold standard.

Apparently the economic equilibrium, which the President in his speeches indicated should precede currency stabilization, has not yet developed. Wall street opinion leans to the view that de facto monetary stabilization would end the era of uncertainty, and thus contribute to the economic balance which the President seeks. Devaluation at 50 cents, it is argued, would double the nominal value of the gold holdings of the Federal Reserve System, aid would create a tremendous opportunity for reflation within the framework of orthodox "sound money."

URGE STABILIZATION

If the President has turned the world into a vast laboratory for the testing of Prof. Warren's theory concerning the effect of a rise in the price of gold on the commodity price level, it must be granted that critics are impatient and forgetful of the usual statistical time lag.

Bankers, investors, and other possessors of liquid wealth feel that they are the guinea pigs in the experiment, and apparently they do not relish their role.

Accordingly, the pressure for stabilization continues to grow.

Dominant groups in Wall street would like to see the President stabilize the dollar and modify the security and banking acts in ways which they contend would promote the capital market.

Meantime, President Roosevelt, whether he wills or no, is for the short term at least the czar of speculation.

On his decisions depend price fluctuations explosive in character.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Don't be late to school, fellows!

We know that it is hard to get up sometimes this cold weather, but school makes it well worth the effort every time. A fellow who misses school is missing something very valuable.

Once a wise man said: "Knowledge is more precious than rubies."

He knew what he was talking about. You must know how to read and write and do arithmetic and many other things to be a smart fellow these days.

And every day of school teaches you more about such things. If you miss it, you will have a hard time making it up—maybe you will never get the chance to do it.

Do you have thirst for knowledge, fellows? That is, are you so interested in your school work and in finding out all kinds of things that you will study more and learn more than the teacher makes you?

That is something to be proud about. The more you know about the world, the more wonderful everything is. Men can explain what makes the rainbow. Do you know? How did men find out how far away the moon is from the earth? Do you know? What makes the locomotive run—or your automobile, or makes the electric lights in your house make a light? Wouldn't you like to know about such things? Of course, you would. And that's why we are hoping that you will study hard, and ask questions, and read more about things.

Your teacher wants to help you. If there is something you want to find out about, ask her how to do it.

How are your drawings coming along, fellows? You haven't forgotten that we like to get drawings, have you? Send them in—the more the better, and be sure you draw them with black ink on white cardboard. Don't color them, fellows, because if you do we can't put them in the paper.

Captains, what are your patrols doing? Keep in touch with headquarters and when you have a party or a good meeting, write and tell us about it.

HOME, SAVINGS LOST IN FIRE

NEW KENSINGTON, Nov. 18.—It is a sad day for Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hatfield and their 6-year-old son, of South Bluff drive, East Kensington, New Kensington.

For months Hatfield has worked only occasionally. Last week Mrs. Hatfield obtained work in a garment factory.

She was paid yesterday and carefully stored most of the money in their house. Then with the remainder of the family she left to make some badly-needed purchases.

On returning home last night the family found the house ablaze.

The one and a half-story frame dwelling was destroyed along with their meager savings. Firemen, who believe the fire to have been caused by an overheated stove, estimated the damage at $2,000.

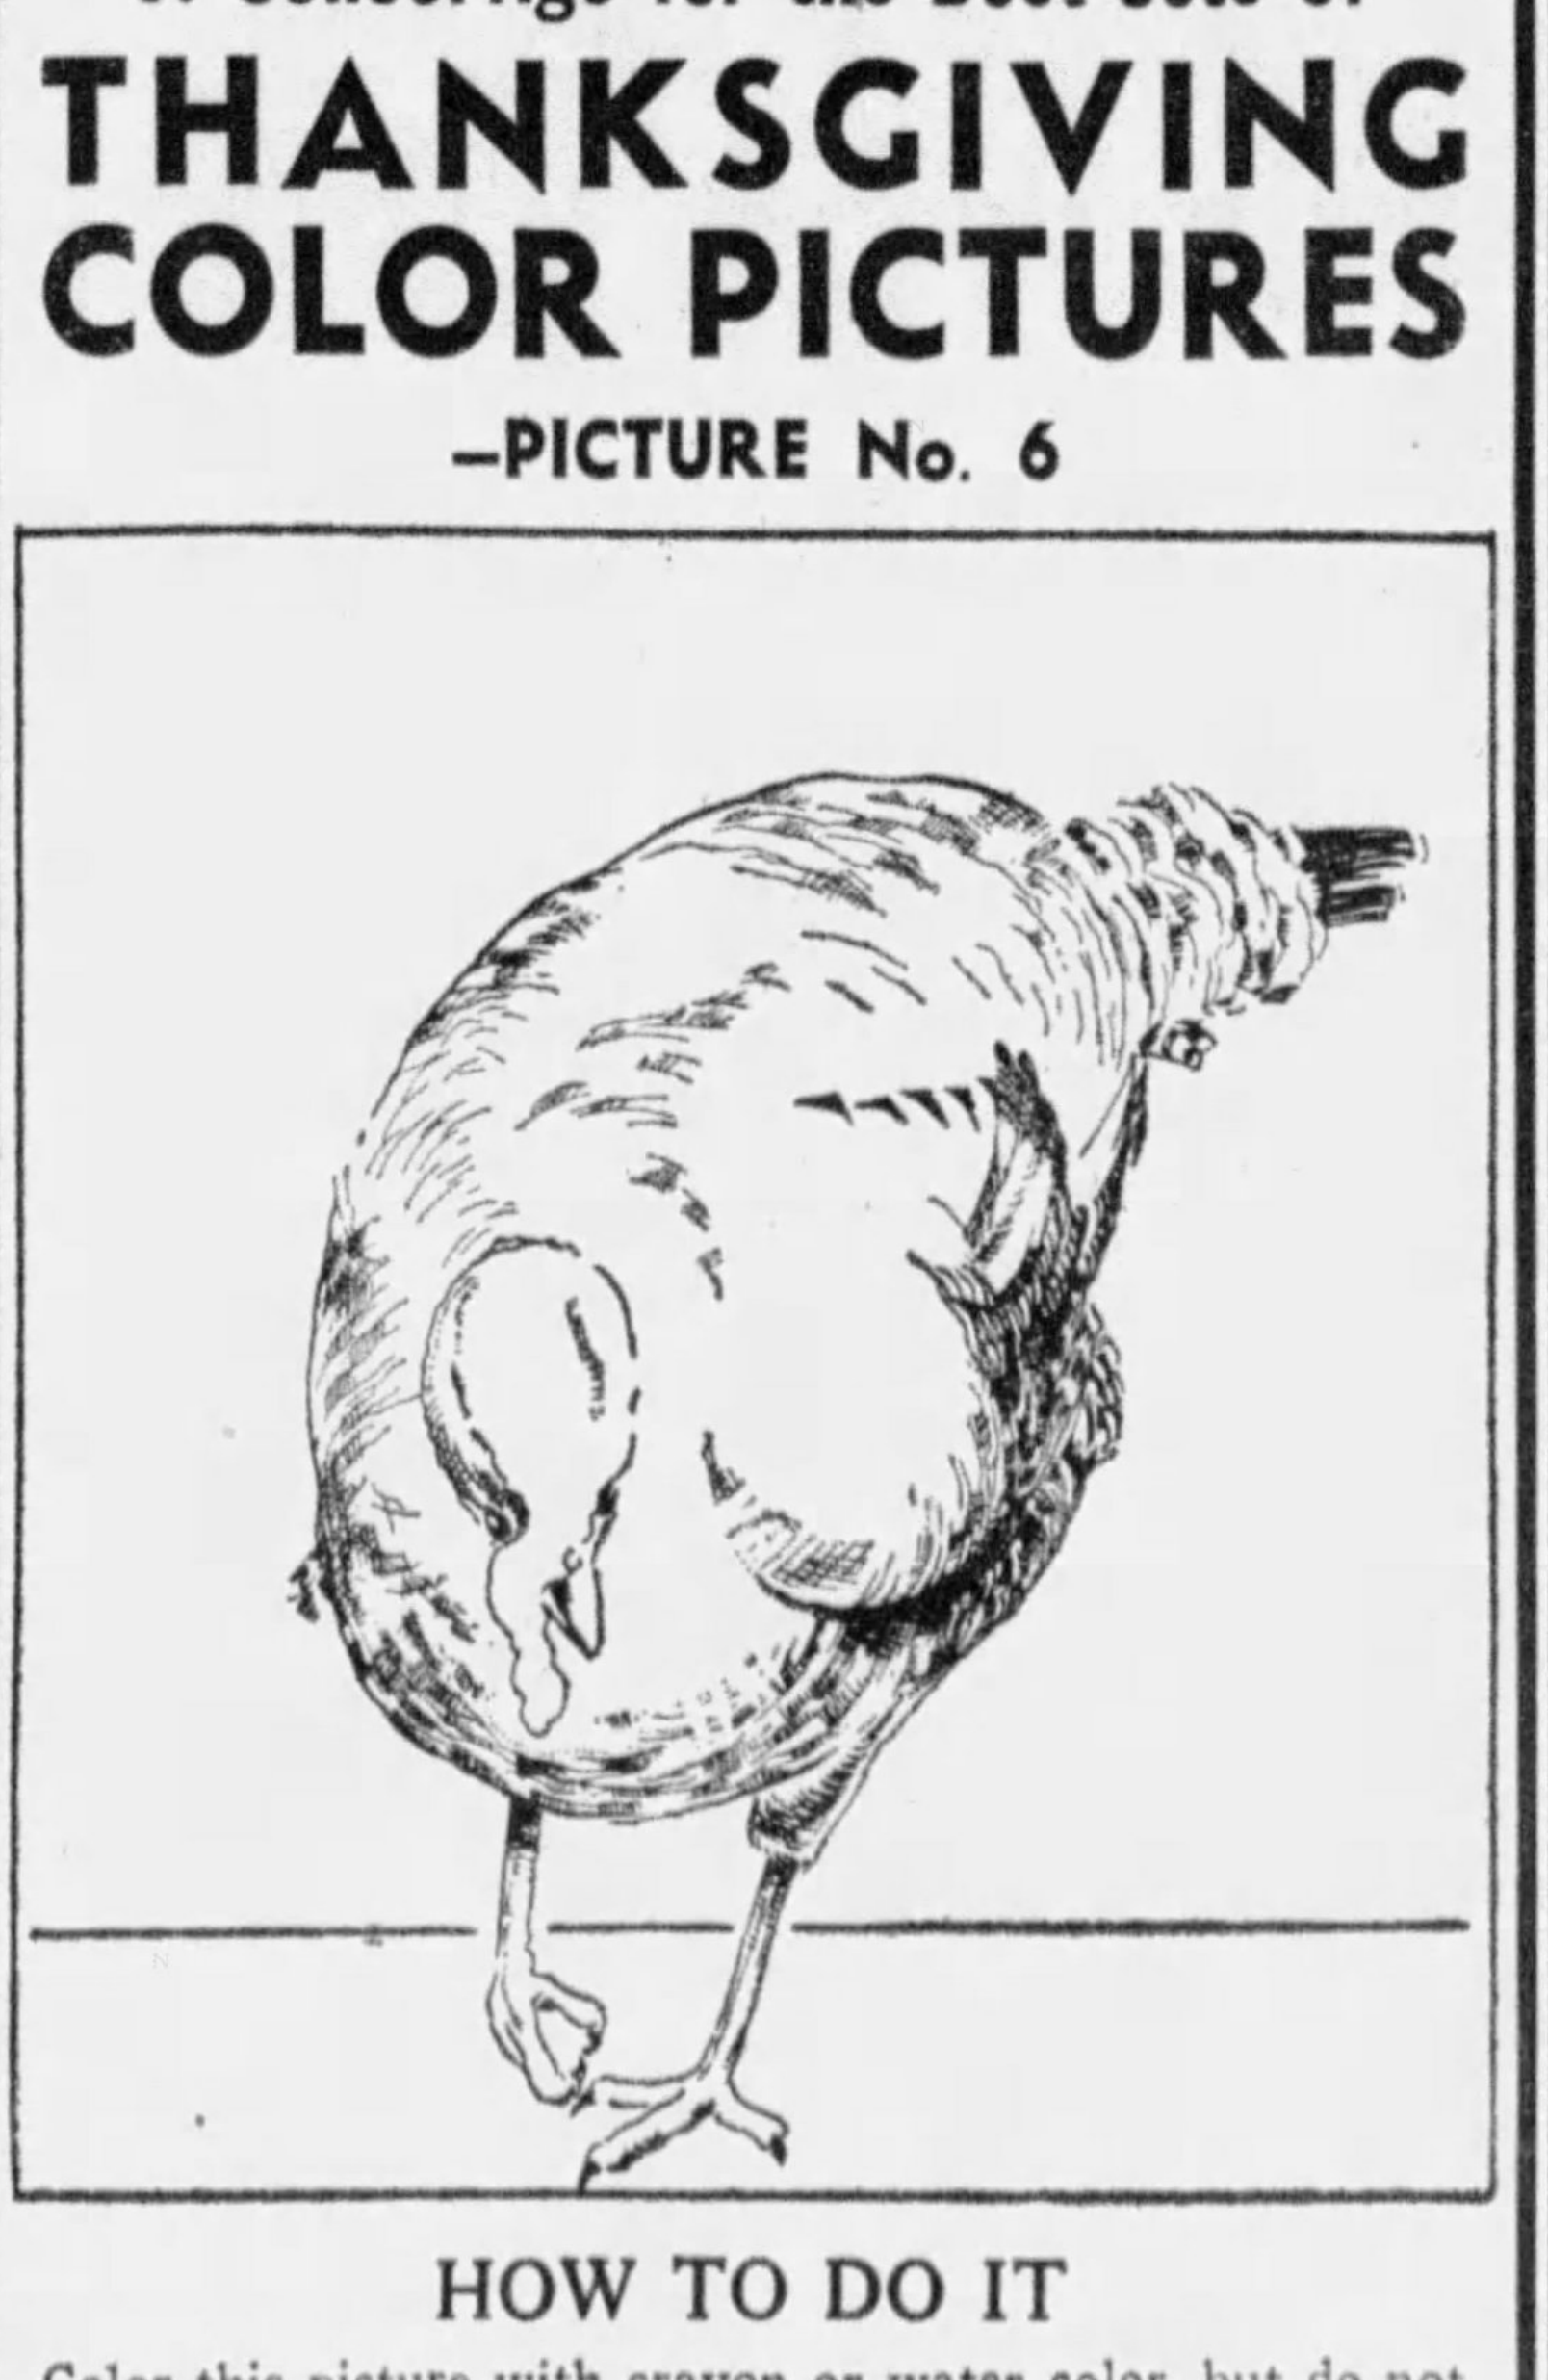
To Be Awarded to Boys and Girls of School Age for the Best Sets of

THANKSGIVING COLOR PICTURES

—PICTURE No. 6



HOW TO DO IT

Color this picture with crayon or water color, but do not send it in until the complete series of 12 has been printed. There will be one picture in the Sun-Telegraph every day. No. 7 will appear Monday. This is a fine opportunity for all school classes to participate.

Read These Simple Rules

1—Anyone in the Pittsburgh area can enter this contest except professional artists and employees of the Sun-Telegraph and their families.

2—You are to color the drawings as nearly as possible to their natural colors. Use crayon or water colors.

3—The decision of the judges will be final.

4—Neatness and form of presentation will be the basis for judging the entries.

5—It is not necessary to buy a paper to enter this contest. You may trace these drawings from papers on file at the public libraries or at the Sun-Telegraph office.

6—You may enter as many sets of pictures as you wish; the more you enter the better your chance to win.

7—One picture will be published each day starting Monday, November 13.

8—Do not send any drawings to this office until you have a complete set of twelve pictures.

9—Contest starts November 13 and closes midnight Monday, November 27.

10—Send all entries to the Thanksgiving Coloring Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Girl Who Won

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XXXV.

Coffee and liquors were served before a crackling log fire in the living-room.

Rhoda contrived to get Tony on the deep settee beside her. It was low and very cushiony, and when one sat in it one literally sank down.

The sides and back were high, so that it gave a sort of privacy from the rest of the room.

The butler brought in coffee, setting it out on a small table by the hearth.

Synopsis

Nollie Day, stenographer at an exclusive hotel, is befriended by wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. Nollie goes to a theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Nollie wants to clear her identity, but is unable to get in touch with Tony. Mrs. Judson returns and ask Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch. Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane. Rhoda seems to dislike Nollie. Nollie and the widow leave for the ranch after inviting Rhoda. Nollie is surprised when she meets Tony near the ranch. Tony is pleased when she tells him she is not Mrs. Judson. Rhoda visits the ranch and it develops that she knows Tony.

Now Go On

"Nollie, you pour, please! I'm too darn lazy," said the hostess.

"Sugar for you, Miss Vane"

But Rhoda had turned her head away. She was gazing into Tony's eyes and was deep in talk with him.

"I beg your pardon," said Nollie, repeating her question.

Rhoda mumbled something.

Nollie's hands trembled as she poured the coffee, so that some of the liquid spattered on the saucer.

"Ugh! I couldn't take it that way. It would drip on my dress, my dear," exclaimed Rhoda patronizingly.

Nollie flushed. "I'm sorry. I'll run and get you a fresh saucer."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," interpolated Mrs. Judson. "Simmons will see to it." And she rang for the butler.

When the butler had brought the required saucer and withdrawn, Rhoda raised her cup delicately, took a sip and made another grimace.

"Ugh! You've put sugar in it, and I told you just now I never take anything sweet."

"I didn't hear you," Nollie was embarrassed.

NOLLIE ALARMED

She took the cup away herself this time and got another one.

"You'd better pour your coffee yourself, Rhoda, so that it's to your liking," observed Jinny Judson.

"Am I an awful nuisance?" The question was put plaintively to the hostess, but Rhoda's eyes made swift appeal to Tony O'Brien.

Tony, however, was regarding Nollie for whom at the moment he felt sorry.

A paid dependent in this house was she. At the beck and call of these women.

Rhoda had intended that he should be made to see the exact status of this young person.

"She hates me. She wants to show me up. She wants Tony to think I'm stupid and inferior."

And that stabbing fear caught Nollie again, so that she could have burst into tears.

Rhoda was talking of mutual friends of half a dozen interests she apparently had with young Mr. O'Brien.

They were not of HER world, wretchedly thought Nollie, hearing them.

They seemed to have so many friends in common.

Mrs. Judson turned the radio on, because she wanted to make an interruption to Rhoda's tete-a-tete with the young man.

But the music merely served to make a sort of cover for her talk. Rhoda edged nearer Tony on the wide, deep sofa.

"What on earth is she gabbing about? I wish I'd never asked her here." Mrs. Judson beckoned Nollie to the far end of the living room, away from the couple.

SURPRISING NEWS

"They're quite old friends, it seems," said Nollie with stiff lips, trying to smile, to pass it off. Her thoughts were a raw anguish.

"Well, she came up here deliberately on his track. I'd no idea until now that HE was the young man she spoke of."

"What young man?" asked Nollie, full of anxiety.

"The man she's crazy about. The man whose fascinations lured her back from Europe weeks sooner than she'd intended."

Nollie said faintly: "Did—did Miss Vane really tell you that?"

"She said she'd changed her mind and returned home because of some wonderful man, and when she found out where this ranch of mine was located, she practically invited herself up, because she'd discovered he was to be in the neighborhood. I knew she was a huntress, and you can take it from me she's out for blood," whispered Mrs. Judson, irritated.

She watched Nollie's face as she spoke. She was in a dilemma about these two young women.

But Nollie had courage and pride. She wouldn't let anybody see her feeling.

"She's welcome to him if she can get him. It's a free world—" —Nollie even contrived a careless shrug and a little laugh that the sound of the radio covered.

Mrs. Judson nodded approvingly. Here was a sporting spirit.

She slipped a hand in Nollie's arm. "Let's go get the bridge table."

They left the room. In the library Mrs. Judson sank down into a chair.

"We won't stay long. I hate to leave that nice young man alone with the vampire."

"Come, Mrs. Judson, she surely isn't as bad as that." And Nollie forced herself to smile.

RHODA JEALOUS

"She's designing as they come. If I'd known it was the romantic young chap who was your escort that night and whom you made such a hit with, I'd have put the kybosh on this visit of Rhoda's."

"But—why—it's nothing to do with ME. It's not as though there were anything in it. I'm not even a guest in this house."

"You are indeed. You're a guest of mine. I shall make that perfectly clear to everybody."

"It isn't—quite. Not that I mind. You've been simply wonderful to me."

As she saw Nollie's perturbation, Mrs. Judson's eyes grew worried.

"I'll bet that Rhoda woman said something nasty when she met you tonight in the hall with young O'Brien?"

"Yes." Nollie hesitated. "She wasn't exactly nasty. At least I don't think she meant to be. She asked me if I was the secretary or—or your housekeeper-companion?"

"She did! She would! I might have known it! One of the women down at Juan told me that when Rhoda was jealous she was absolutely feline!"

"She would not be jealous of me," protested Nollie.

"There you're mistaken. Before she made the grand entrance at dinner tonight I was in her bedroom with her and I told her we were expecting a young man I'd never met—a Mr. O'Brien."

"She was quite excited. I could see her color change. And the first thing she said was: "On whose invitation is he coming here? Is he a friend of that little secretary person?"

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

When you are entertaining guests for a long or short period, do you stop to consider what would be most enjoyed by your guests individually or do you plan what you have always wanted to do yourself?

Perhaps you plan what is easiest for you and say to yourself, "As I am doing this entertaining let them take what they get and be thankful."

If you want your guests happy that is not the right way to feel.

To be a guest signifies that generous hospitality is extended to you.

To entertain a guest is to show deference to the one under your roof, by chance or invited, for a short period.

It would be more kindly not to pretend to entertain if you are not willing to consult the taste and wishes of the ones who are to accept your hospitality.

Every once in a while a host or a hostess is encountered who seems to begrudge any extra work done in behalf of guests.

Some hostesses make it baldly apparent just when the guests are expected to depart.

That could be obviated by setting an arriving and a going away time.

AMERICAN WOMEN IN THE CIVIL WAR

The Civil War was fought not only through the heroism of the men but also with great sacrifices by the women. President Lincoln, opening the fair at Baltimore, said: "...I must say, that if all that has been said by orators and poets since the creation of the world in praise of women, were applied to the women of America, it would not do them justice for their conduct during the war..." CYANAMID PROCESS (Chemistry)

Calcium cyanamide ($CaCN_2$), a fertilizer, is produced by heating calcium carbide in presence of nitrogen. CaC_2, obtained from coke and limestone in the electric furnace (Pict. Ed., Nov. 16), is put in perforated cans into an oven where pure nitrogen is circulated. The carbide is heated electrically to about 1100°C. by carbon rods that run through the carbide in the drums: $CaC_2+N_2=CaCN_2+C$. It is about 60 per cent pure, the rest is lime and carbon. Ground, moistened (to slake the lime) and dried it is ready for fertilizer. With steam it gives ammonia: $CaCN_2+3H_2O=CaCO_3+2NH_3$ (ammonia).

After Old Cuts

REVOLUTION AGAINST THE HABSBURGS (1848-1849)

The flames of revolution in mid-Nineteenth Century, spread quickly from France all over Europe. One of the first risings was in Vienna where streets were barricaded in the fighting (above). The Czechs, too, thought their time had come for liberation. Both were suppressed. Hungary revolted, dethroning the Habsburgs, establishing a government under Kossuth, the outstanding statesman. With Russian help this too, was crushed, and the people had to suffer the reprisals of the reactionary government. (World History)

ANTIPHOLUS, OF SYRACUSE, BEATS DROMIO FOR HIS JEST (Act. IV, Sc. 4)

Shakespeare weaves the humorous incidents arising from personal resemblance of two pairs of twins into a farcical play, "The Comedy of Errors." Antipholus of Ephesus and Antipholus of Syracuse were twins, separated in early childhood, each with a servant Dromio, also twins. The Syracusan, in the search for his brother comes to Ephesus where humorous complications arise with his unknown sister-in-law, merchants, officers, etc. Hunted as a lunatic, he flees into an abbey. His father searching for both sons and wife has been arrested at Ephesus as undesirable and is led to execution past this abbey. Through meeting of both pairs of twins, the errors due to their resemblance are cleared and they are happily reunited with their pardoned father, who finds the abbess is his lost wife. NEMATHELMINTHES (ROUND WORMS) SIXTH ANIMAL PHYLUM (ABOUT 1,500 SPECIES)

The Nematoda (threadworms), cylindrical, mostly parasitic animals belong to this phylum. Above: The trichinella spiralis and the hookworm, two dangerous species.

The trichinella lives in the intestines of man, pig, rat, mouse, dog and cat. It produces young by the thousands. They migrate via blood and lymph into the organs of the host, forming cysts and often causing death. Man is infected (trichinosis) by undercooked pork, containing cysts.

Hook worm (Necator americanus) infection may occur through the mouth or skin when the eggs pass directly into the blood and are carried to the heart, lungs, etc., causing serious damage. Well cleaned, thoroughly cooked food, avoidance of handling pets, no contact with polluted soil and water are important in preventing infection. (Gen. Science)

Its leaves are alternate, ovate, serrate, hairy on lower surface; staminate flowers are in catkins, pistillate small with crimson stigmas. Fruit is brown ovoid nut, in two leafy bracelets; kernel is sweet, edible. Range: Ontario-Florida. It grows on border of woodlands and hillsides. It is planted for nuts and ornamental purposes. (Gen. Advice to Young Drinkers

Everybody is much interested in the Rockefeller plan for the distribution and control of liquor.

The young fellow admits that he had had no experience with this aggravating liquid. But if he is willing to learn just let him cushion himself comfortably and listen to the old master:

1—There can be no real control of liquor until they make ankles shock-proof.

2—Barroom fights will start as usual unscheduled and without the fanfare of trumpets. When they do you will find that the air currents are less severe near the floor.

3—Argue all you want with the blustering 200-pounders. But never bother a little man with watery eyes who is minding his own business. That's the kind of a bird who can punch like a fool fixing a boiler.

4.—A finger of whisky is measured horizontally and not vertically.

IS THAT SO!
YEAH THAT'S SO!
LOOK OUT— THEM LITTLE GUYS ARE BAD NEWS!

5—It is all right to hang to a lamp post. But don't hug it and say, "Goodness, sweetheart, you are getting thin."

6—When a policeman asks you where you live thank him for reminding you of it.

7—Sitting up all night with a sick friend is great provided he is the sickest.

8—Don't tell the wife you are going down to the corner to get the baseball scores in December.

9—Never ask the bartender if he dyes his hair. They all do. But that question always makes them madder than an overloaded mule.

10—When the next customer elbows you and growls, "Who are you shoving?" You have your choice of taking it on the lamm or on the chin. That's a question with a hundred wrong answers.

These are but a few of the problems hooked up with the distribution and control of the cup that requires no cheer-leader. Start slowly. Take it easy. And don't ask for 10 gallons at every filling station.

Let It Be Useful Work

The Unemployed Should Be Given Jobs That Are Socially Valuable—Comment on Local News.

*In a letter to Director Edward G. Lang, of the De*partment of Public Works, concerning the employment that is to be given jobless men in the parks under the auspices of the Civil Works Administration, Leo Lehman, prominent Pittsburgh businessman, expresses the hope that they will be put to work on projects of the greatest social value. There will be general concurrence in that wish.

It is reassuring to learn from Director Lang that in accordance with the wishes of the administration at Washington he intends to use the emergency workers whose wages will be paid by the federal government, not in mere odd jobs, but in projects of permanent value, such as swimming pools and tennis courts.

It is of the greatest importance, of course, that the needy men shall be put to work at once. There is no time for preliminary surveys and study of blueprints. But it does not follow that the men must be handed picks and shovels and started digging at the first place that comes to mind. For it may be there are other places where their work would be much more valuable to the community.

Director Lang probably will be glad to consider suggestions for jobs for the unemployed. Mr. Lehman submits two that are interesting. He proposes the erection of a concrete barrier on the lower side of the central roadway in Schenley Park as a protection for motorists, and the construction of paths and benches on the hillside along Bigelow boulevard in the neighborhood of the Municipal Hospital, to make a little park out of it.

John M. Phillips, former Councilman, has some ideas for the improvement of Frick Woods Park that should appeal to Director Lang. Mr. Phillips wants some trees planted for the birds and the squirrels—Russian mulberry trees, mountain ash, black haws, hickory and walnut trees. The squirrels need some hard-shelled nuts, Mr. Phillips explains, to wear down their teeth, which grow to an embarrassing length when they feed too extensively on peanuts.

A conservationist and sportsman, Mr. Phillips for years has been planting black walnut trees in and around Pittsburgh, and encouraging others to do so, to supply food for squirrels and for other reasons. Under his direction a troop of Boy Scouts planted 1.126 walnuts in South Park on October 28 and 900 the following day, and they have 4,000 more that they will plant when the weather permits.

*That there are valuable possibilities in Mr. Phil*lips' hobby, that it is worthy of the attention of adults as well as Boy Scouts, is strongly indicated by John W. Hershey, of Downingtown, Pa., secretary of the Pennsylvania Nut Growers' Association, in an article in this week's ''Service Letter'' of the Department of Forests and Waters. Walnut trees will bear in from nine to 10 years after planting.

Mr. Hershey has been in and around Pittsburgh this fall, talking to coal operators who sought advice as to how they might utilize their idle land. He has told them there is money in walnuts, and that cultivation of a walnut grove costs less than a quarter as much as the cultivation of a fruit orchard. Land in this vicinity is well adapted to the growing of walnuts.

Mr. Hershey makes the interesting statement that by careful grafting a new variety of black walnut has been developed, with a thin shell, easily cracked, from which the meat can easily be extracted in large pieces. He thinks there is to be a big market for the nursery stock. There is much idle land around Pittsburgh besides coal land which apparently might be planted in walnuts with profit.

*In the schedule of license fees which Council pro*poses to charge for permits for Sunday ball games it is stipulated that $1 must be paid even if there is no charge for admission. This is undesirable, because it might conceivably embarrass boys who would have difficulty in raising a dollar, or at any rate might tempt them to play without going to the trouble of taking out a permit.

The penalty for violation of the ordinance is to be a $10 fine or five days in jail. Notwithstanding this threat, we doubt if the permit requirement can be enforced at every Sunday football or baseball game played by youngsters on vacant lots. The revenue to be derived from the $1 license fee would not be large enough to compensate for the trouble of trying to collect it. Let the youngsters play, free of tax.

*Mayor-elect W. N. McNair's proposal to ask Presi*dent Roosevelt to designate Pittsburgh as a free port where goods from abroad may be landed without payment of duty is probably not to be taken too seriously. But it is interesting to note that Mayor-elect Fiiorello LaGuardia, of New York, said in Havana a few days ago that he was going to ask that Staten Island be made a free port.

Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction, contributed something interesting yesterday to the discussion of the costs of public education in the statement that enrollment in the high schools of Pennsylvania has increased 1,000 per cent since 1900. This imposes a heavy burden on the taxpayers, but in our opinion it is well worth the cost.

During September 4.032 licenses to carry firearms were issued in Pennsylvania, the Secretary of the Commonwealth reports. Thousands receive these permits monthly, and if all avail themselves of the permission a considerable portion of the population must be going about armed. No wonder there are so many shooting affrays, such as that fatal one on Grant street the other day.

*A page of X-ray photographs of some common*place things reveals them as anything but commonplace. Such a page will be found in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the fascinating magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. You will like the cover, a full page reproduction in colors of a painting symbolizing the "New Deal."

How a company of giant moths dealt with the policemen attempting to rescue Boob McNutt and his companions from Dr. Zano is thrillingly pictured by Rube Goldberg in tomorrow's issue of Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. There are many other delightful funnies by famous humorists in Puck.

Scotched, Not Slain

Scotched is the repulsive reptile,
Injured is the lurking menace
By the first stone hurled upon it

And that stout club must be wielded
To administer the death-blow.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—At breakfast I thought of a rambling essay for today such as "On Going for a Walk!" But with Hazlitt and Stevenson toying with the idea so superbly, it's presumptuous. Yet someone should awaken enthusiasm for the arte ambulandi in a city where it is completely abandoned.

For eight years I've walked three miles daily, generally at sundown. I hear John H. Finley, of the Times, walks five. Lee Shubert, six. But how puny compared to DeQuincey and Wordsworth, who calculated they hiked 180,000 English miles. Yet they chose the rousing stretches of countryside.

In New York one must be content leisurely to saunter. If one has a companion it must be one with a Harpo Marx understanding of silence. Walking and talking are separate arts and cannot be mixed. There must be no outcry at some sweep of exquisite landscape. A nod toward it tells all.

The accomplished walker learns to tuck such peacock views away in a membrane of memory where they are never lost. He becomes a collector of rare imagery with a storehouse of treasures. Words crash in on them, despoil their beauty, usefulness and charm.

* * *

There is the story of Emily Bronte walking one crisp November evening across the Yorkshire moors with a companion. In a sudden flicker of rotation the horizon swallowed a disc of burnished red that was the sun, leaving a shimmer of heliotrope twilight. Her companion voiced a tremulous ecstasy. "There," exclimed Miss Bronte, "you have ruined everything!" It was a vista to be hailed only by silence.

* * *

A delightful straightaway hour's saunter in the greater city is Harlem's Speedway. No streets to cross, a smooth grass-fringed pavement, two bridges spanning a river gliding with Columbia sculls, pert tugs. Flung up westward is that inspiring cliff, Coogan's Bluff, and jutting the entire length a latticed stone balustrade. Every good walk should have a parapet upon which one may learn to watch fish scale patterns crinkle the water and grow contemplative.

Much of the clean splendor of strolling along upper reaches of Riverside Drive has been befogged by gasoline vapours and buzzard-gagging odors floating from Jersey glue factories. Yet that celestial peak, Inspiration Point, near 165th street, is still entrancing. Outside glowering Storm King further up it, affords the most dazzling view of the Hudson. Across yonder the palisades veining the softly changing colors Washington Irving loved. Victor Herbert told me it was one starry night he sat dreaming on a bench here and, caught in the confusion of far-away tones, went home and turned out the tune "Kiss Me Again," which Fritzi Scheff sung and which will delight lovers evermore.

I commend, too, for a briefer amble that patch known as Carl Schurz park tossed so topsy-turvily in the Yorkville jostle at 88th street. The riverside, especially, with esplanade and sturdy benches of transplanted Teutons with goose-neck pipes and dachshunds. Here one may bump into Irving Berlin. Or Vincent Astor. Elisabeth Marbury often drifted here after a trying day, and on its benches Amy Lowell, when visiting town, mulled over verse and puffed diminutive cigars in the gloaming. And Ring Lardner liked it.

The Jimmy Walker side of St. Luke's Place is among the vanishing areas with back yards, dormer windows, white lintels and brick chimneys sticking out attic roofs. It takes only a few steps to traverse it. A good taking-off place for an idling hour through Greenwich Village. And despite its hodge-podge of fakery, there are forgotten twists in Village streets that exult the wanderer. Grove street, for instance, has a Dickensy flavor with foot-scrapers and pull doorbells. Gay street, too.

An exciting city mile to lay under heel is the avenue at the vesperal hour. From the Plaza fountain southward to Madison Square. Homo Americanus with or without spats, monocle and walking stick. Otto Kahn, Lily Pons, John D. Jr., Peter Arno. Life sizzling from the pan. Splashes from an Arabian color box. Vivid, grotesque, pathetic.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

How Real Are You?

These people who never quite "click"—what's the matter with them?

Seemingly they have all the makings of popularity and success. They're nicely dressed, friendly, easy on the eye, eager to help. They're ready to do anything, go anywhere, agree with any wish or opinion you may express. And yet—

They're always left out of the lists! People like them for a little while; then forget them. Somebody else gets the chance, the invitation or the friendship on which they've set their hearts. Why?

They themselves can give you a dozen reasons. They "have no luck." Other people are "jealous of them," "do them dirt." They're sensitive, timid, self-conscious. They "can't push themselves forward the way coarser people can."

Endless reasons. A little truth in all of them, perhaps. Yet—the main reason for their failure is something entirely different.

Why doesn't the world give these people a real break?

BECAUSE THEY'RE NOT REAL PEOPLE.

"But everybody's real!"

No, stranger, you're wrong. Millions of people aren't real—never even try to be real. Millions of people spend their lives trying to be like somebody else; trying to "do the proper thing," whether it suits or expresses them or not.

Such people live in a strange dream, in which brief hope and excitement alternate with long spells of fear, discouragement and resentment. Constantly they whisper to themselves:

"If only I could be like other people!"

And in that effort to "be like other people" they toil tirelessly. They read the "right" books, even though they can't understand them. They wear the "right" clothes, or go to the "right" places, even though they don't like them. Yet it's all in vain! In spite of all their efforts, they create no impression, establish no power.

Other people—homelier women, more stupid men—"people who don't try half as hard"—are liked, loved, quoted, respected—given the "breaks" while they are lost in the shuffle. "Nobody ever takes them serious." Why?

BECAUSE THERE'S NOTHING TO TAKE SERIOUSLY.

Why do we like people? We like people because of what they are. We like or dislike people because they are themselves. We may sometimes, because it flatters our conceit, encourage yes-men. But we soon weary of people who try to be reflections of ourselves, who ape our manners and echo our notions.

We want people to be REAL. We want them to be distinct and different from ourselves—to have their own way of thinking, their own way of doing things—because that very difference adds something to our own limited lives.

We may not always agree with them. But we respect them for having the courage to live in their own way. And we're secretly grateful to them, for, by being themselves, they quicken our courage and stimulate our sluggish imaginations.

That's why we like people. That's why we prefer and demand REAL people. That's why we're indifferent if not actually hostile to people who aren't real.

FOR PEOPLE WHO AREN'T REAL AREN'T REALLY PEOPLE! They fail in all the qualities which we expect of our close friends or helpers. They're not really as amusing as a good phonograph record, or as reliable as a robot. They are only echoes—and you can never count on an echo.

The world despises people who aren't REAL. And never has it had so little use for them as it has now, for never has there been as great need of sincerity, originality, initiative—self-starting personality.

Are YOU trying to find your place in the world? Are you failing to click, in spite of your tremendous effort to Please Everybody? Then ask yourself just one question—and try to answer it honestly:

HOW REAL AM I?

AM I OFFERING THE WORLD ANYTHING NEW AND TRUE THAT BEARS MY OWN TRADE MARK? OR AM I JUST "ANOTHER SUBSTITUTE" FOR AN ESTABLISHED BRAND OF GOODS?

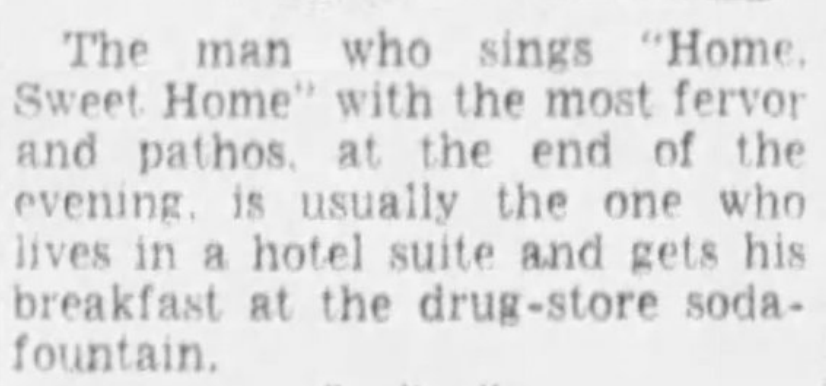
MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Lockless Wedlock

Nowadays, when "a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," a girl has to be a fast worker to catch it and tether it before it turns to another love.



I COULD LOVE A GIRL LIKE YOU
YES—I KNOW

The man who sings "Home, Sweet Home" with the most fervor and pathos, at the end of the evening, is usually the one who lives in a hotel suite and gets his breakfast at the drug-store soda-fountain.

* * *

Don't always imagine that a man has lost his heart when he becomes impetuous after a few cocktails; he has merely mislaid his discretion.

* * *

A woman's greatest charms for men are neither brains nor beauty. They are first, poise—self-possession; second, cheerfulness—a ready laugh and a spontaneous smile; third, style—the ability to wear smart clothes; fourth, a sympathetic ear; fifth, a knack for passing the apple-sauce.

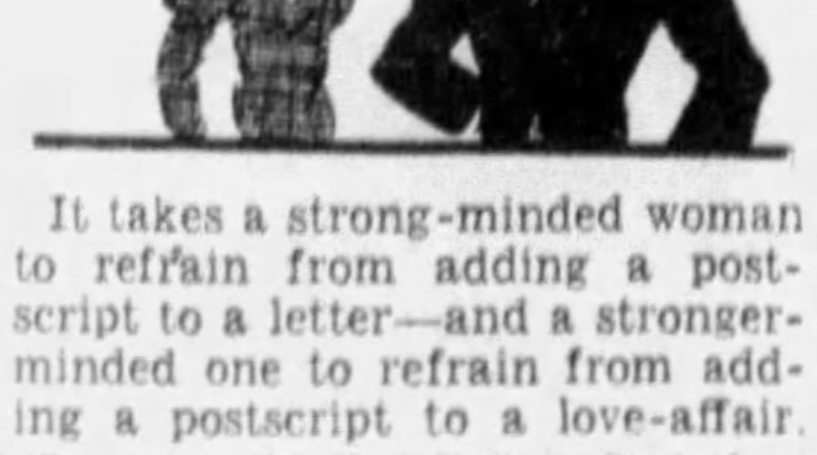
The younger generation's idea of marriage appears to be a sort of lockless wedlock, which makes the door wide open for a quick get-away, the moment the glamour wears off.

* * *

Why not an NRA code for heart-balm seekers? The price of a husband's fluctuating affections is positively skyrocketing. But to ask even a few thousands for a "love" that is colder than yesterday's welsh-rarebit seems just like profiteering.

* * *

The cynics may not believe it; but, in spite of the gold-diggers, the world is filled with attractive young girls who would rather have a young man's love than a rich old boy's alimony-checks.



It takes a strong-minded woman to refrain from adding a postscript to a letter—and a stronger-minded one to refrain from adding a postscript to a love-affair.

Gen. Hugh L. Scott, Noted for His Work Among the Indians, Completes Another Service

By Edwin C. Hill

"THE man who talks with his hands" has just completed another splendid service for his country, a service which he alone could render — the recording for posterity of the sign language of the American Indian tribes. The Indians themselves gave to the old soldier, who knows them better, perhaps, than any living man, his title.

He is Hugh Lenox Scott, major general, U. S. A., retired, one of the few survivors of the old army—the army of Sherman, Sheridan, Custer, Crook and Mills. High officers delight to point him out to shavetails as the ideal American soldier, "brave to a fault, unfaltering in the line of duty, loyal to superiors but never bending the knee for favor; honest as the sun and devoted to flag and country"—hale and hearty today for all his silvery hair and his more than 80 years.

When Gen. Scott came out of West Point and joined Custer's old command, the Seventh Cavalry, buffalo were roaming the plains and the Indians were on the warpath. Covered wagons followed the trails to Oregon, Santa Fe and to California. The proud cities of today were clusters of log cabins and muddy streets. The Union Pacific had been completed only a few years.

* * *

Served as Youth In Custer Country

THE impetuous Custer was making his last stand at Little Big Horn at the time Hugh Scott was getting his diploma at West Point. In a few months Lieut. Scott was on duty in the Yellowstone country of Custer, Crazy-Horse and Rain-in-the-Face. There is soon occurred to him that, in addition to fighting the Indian, it might be just as important to study him, get his ideas, and learn the workings of his mind.

He mastered the Sioux language and then, realizing that it would be the work of 10 lifetimes to master all the dialects, he took the short cut and devoted himself to the sign language. It was a mute tongue, but it needed no interpreter among any of the tribes, Cheyenne, Apache, Shoshone, Blackfeet or Crow.

Within two years his study bore fruit, enabling him to go among the Cheyennes and persuade them in 1878 to take off their war paint. He was to be recognized not only as the greatest Indian authority in the country but also as the greatest friend of the Indian.

It was Capt. Hugh Scott who went directly to the Great White Father in the White House to unfold to him a raw deal which was being put over on the Indians. And he tells how President Cleveland jumped from behind his desk and with emphatic indignation exclaimed:

"I will not permit it. I will see justice done."

Capt. Scott knew all the great chiefs—Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and Geronimo—and the famous scout, William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill." Of Col. Cody, Gen. Scott says:

"He was a wonderful shot on foot or horseback, a superhunter of big game, a splendid guide for troops in the field and a pony express rider without peer. There was no country infested with wild Indians too dangerous for him to carry through an important dispatch."

* * *

Successful in Pacifying Indians

THE young Army officer came to understand that the Indians believed always that they were fighting for liberty and for their property. He went freely and fearlessly among the tribes, and more than once the sign language saved him from captivity or even death. As late as 1911 he quieted the Hopis of Arizona, and before then in 1908, at the age of 55, he rode alone hundreds of miles to calm thousands of angry Apaches.

"I never doubted," he says, "that if I could get to the Indians in time, they would listen to me. I always feared what the white man would do legally before I could reach the Indians."

This great soldier of the plains was to show the same independence and utter fearlessness in Cuba, in the Philippines, and on the Mexican border during the war between Villa and Carranza. In the Philippines they gave Major Scott the task of civilizing one hundred thousand bloodthirsty Moros.

As military governor of Sulu, Scott rode up to the palace of the Emperor Jamulal and told his highness to free his slaves. That done he decided that there were too many of the two-edged knife-like swords, called bolos, in the hands of the careless and savage subjects. He gathered these up and then brought diplomacy into play.

Jamulal knew nothing about civilization and its wonders, so Scott took him to Manila and showed him the marvels of the linotype machine. And when Scott proved to Jamulal that by the X-Ray machine the whites could see through his very hand, the Emperor was completely reconciled to the new order.

Scott had a way with tough customers, even Pancho Villa learning to refer to him as "my friend, Gen. Scott." It happened that Villa was treating his Carranzista prisoners quite badly. Scott gave him a talking to and then handed him a copy of the textbook of the British Army which contained a chapter on prisoners.

Gen. Scott, chief of staff in 1914, was too old, according to army standards, for field service in the World War. (Incidentally, Germany thought von Hindenburg was too old, too.) So he trained the divisions at Camp Dix, and went with Elihu Root on the mission to Russia.

A memorable career is Hugh Scott's. He himself has told much of it in his book, "Some Memories of a Soldier," which the Century Company published in 1928.

Pan-American Highway On President's Program

By James T. Williams, Jr.

IN the belief that "travel makes all men countrymen," the Roosevelt administration is firmly resolved to increase the rapidity of all forms of transport and passenger travel between the three Americas.

The delegation that will represent the United States at the seventh Pan-American conference, soon to convene at Montevideo, carries instructions from the President to urge that transportation be one of the first questions on the agenda to receive the consideration of the conference.

When Congress convenes next January, the President will recommend that this country bear the entire immediate cost of a scientific survey of a modern Pan-American highway to extend from the southern border of the United States to Santiago, Chile.

To construct this 8,750-mile highway would require only half as much road building as this country has already undertaken as a part of its emergency program of public works.

Such a survey as Mr. Roosevelt has in mind could be made at a cost of less than $500,000. It is in line with the goal of Pan-American aspiration and a development of a policy already approved by Congress.

Ever since the fifth Pan-American conference met at Santiago in 1923, the United States and Mexico have led the Pan-American republics in official consideration of the feasibility of building a highway from the northern part of North America to the southern part of South America.

* * *

Project Indorsed At Havana Meeting

THE project was heartily indorsed at the sixth Pan-American conference, which met at Havana, Cuba, in 1928. Then Congress, upon the recommendation of President Coolidge, appropriated $50,000 in 1929 toward a reconnaissance survey which has recently been completed of a highway through Central America.

Assisted by the Central American republics, this survey was made by the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, the most efficient road building agency in the Western Hemisphere today.

The best route for a highway through the Central American republics, it is agreed, is along the Pacific slope of the mountains. In each of the countries through which it would run existing highways would be used as far as possible.

From the Panama frontier north, the highway would follow the Pacific slope through Costa Rica and cross the continental divide at a point that would connect with a highway running to the Atlantic seaboard of that country.

Through Nicaragua the highway would traverse the area between the lakes of Nicaragua and Managua and the Pacific Ocean. It would make use of existing wagon roads running between the three principal cities of that republic, Leon, Managua and Granada.

* * *

Hall of Mexican Section Finished

WAGON roads already in use throughout the Republic of El Salvador would determine the route through that country and pass through the capital city.

Two routes through Guatemala have been examined—one along the coast, and another east of the volcanic range of mountains, which would probably be preferred.

It is now possible at certain seasons of the year to motor over existing roads from El Salvador through Guatemala City to the southern frontier of Mexico.

More than half of the entire 1,600 miles of the Mexican section of the Inter-American highway has already been completed and is now open to motor traffic.

Nearly one-half of this projected highway between here and Panama—1,250 miles—has been constructed and is open to traffic throughout the year. To finish this project would not cost more than $50,000,000.

Once this highway is open from the southern border of the United States to the Isthmus of Panama, a tremendous impetus will be given to the Roosevelt proposal to extend it from Panama to Santiago, Chile.

A Pan-American highway linking up the three Americas will do more to promote travel, trade and understanding between the three Americas than all the treaties that have been or can be devised.

Isn't It So?

Pity is too often substituted for charity.
